DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

Your Children's Health

demands that the greatest care be exercised in all they take. As a perfectly safe aperient, DINNEFORD'S Pure Fluid Magnesia has no superior.

Many eminent chemists have proved that solid or powdered magnesia is liable to form hard, insoluble lumps in the bowels, endangering and sometimes destroying life. There is no risk with DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

No other aperient should be administered to infants. Prevents food from turning sour during digestion. Especially adapted for delicate constitutions. Recommended by doctors for over 100 years.

The universal remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Indigestion, Sour Eructations, Bilious Affections.

AVOID IMITATIONS.

Look for the name "DINNEFORD'S" on bottle and label.

Pyorrhea Comes to Four Out of Every Five

Bleeding Gums? Trouble Ahead

Pyorrhea follows tender, bleeding gums. It attacks four persons out of every five past forty, and thousands younger, too. That is proved by irrefutable dental statistics.

Once Pyorrhea gains a lodging the gums recede, the teeth loosen, pus-pockets form at the roots, and poison floods the entire system.

Be safe. Go to your dentist regularly for teeth and gum inspection, and brush your teeth with Forhan's For the Gums. If used consistently and used in time, it will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress, and keep the teeth white and clean, and the gums firm and healthy. It is pleasant to the taste as well.

Economical to use—get it at all chemists.

Where Colour Counts

NOT by accident have the distinctive shades offered in generous variety in Tamborina —called "the beautiful Lawn for beautiful Lingerie"—won the praise of the discriminating. Each colour has been the subject of trained artistic experiment, to give it individuality and beauty.

TAMBORINA
Lawn and Nainsook

have the same quality as a good picture, which is best appreciated when you have long lived with it, whereas a poor one grows more hateful every day. Tamborina colours, to use a popular expression, "grow" on one. The Lingerie that is made of them does not weary the taste. An artistic colourist could have predicted as much from a mere inspection of the shades—26 in Tamborina Lawn (42 inches wide) and 17 in Tamborina Nainsook (40 inches wide), at the uniform price of 1/6½ the yard.

Patterns to write for Tamborina Lawn, to be hemstitched, smocked or embroidered for Underwear, Frocks and Blouses; Tamborina Nainsook for Lingerie, Fancy Aprons, Children's Washing Frocks and the like. Patterns, with Drapers' addresses, free on request.

Befrill'd in the new mode, with muslin fresh from Mr. Shoolbred's, my lady needed not to be assur'd that the new gown did, indeed, become her vastly.

In a day when "caveat emptor" was still a maxim to heed seriously, James Shoolbred had already acquired fame as a merchant of the newest and best in fabrics.

On that secure foundation of confidence the modern Shoolbreds stands; proud with a century's continuous growth; now, as ever, the place where old-time quality meets fashion's most modern whim.

ALLENDALE (Left). Skilled cut has set the seal of style on this gabardine Costume; but a note of true individuality is struck by the fine black braid which ornaments both the skirt and the three-quarter length coat. In navy, black, nigger, mole and other colours 7 Guineas

The Louis heels of the lustrous black patent Shoes raise them not a whit above their station in life. One bar fastens and adorns them too. The pair 21/-

MILLINERY. What great issues may not hang upon the sweep of a feather or the ligne of a brim! At Shoolbreds you will find a charming toque in panne, the brim of which turns back from the face, and is caught down at the side giving a "wide" effect. A shaded, uncurled ostrich feather across the back forms a graceful trimming. Can be made in various colours 52/6

Since gown, hat and shoes alone do not make the Autumn ensemble, you should visit Shoolbreds' Glove, Stocking, Lingerie, and Fur sections to complete your toilette.

There is a Fancy Doeskin Gauntlet, cut with skill to grace the hand of the Juliet of 1923. In Grey and Beaver. The pair 12/6

Shoolbred's New Fashion Book should be in the hands of every woman. We will willingly send you a copy in response to a postcard.

ALBURY (Right). Almost severe in its simplicity, were it not for the soft matched marabout trimming, this perfectly tailored Suit exhibits the new flare at the hips of its coat—which, by the way, may be worn open or closed. In all the newest colourings. The suit 15 Gns.

Steel beaded ornament on the tongue adds a spice of zest to the Shoes in grey glacé kid—emphasized by a shaped heel and long slim last. The pair 42/-

"My dear, I owe it to Pond's"

Very, very many women can truthfully say that they owe the delicacy and beauty of their complexion to the regular use of Pond's Vanishing Cream. A large number of stage favourites and recognised beauties of society have already testified that a truly remarkable improvement was noticeable even after a few applications of this delightful complexion cream, and that they would never now be without it.

You, too, can have a complexion soft, smooth and without a blemish—a complexion that will be the adoration and silent envy of your friends. Get one of the opal jars of Pond's Vanishing Cream and let your mirror show you that charm is often just a simple matter of complexion.

Pond's Cold Cream—an invaluable revivifier for "tired" complexions—should be massaged into the skin each night. It is a soothing and cleansing agent which greatly aids in the obliteration of lines, "crow's feet" and wrinkles.*

"TO SOOTHE AND SMOOTH YOUR SKIN."

Both creams obtainable from all chemists and stores in opal jars at 1/3 and 2/6, and in collapsible tubes at 7½d. (hand-bag size) and 1/-.

'Fashioned'

SOME Underwear is 'cut from the piece,' seamed up, and then 'boarded out' to shape. Wolsey 'Fashioned' Underwear is 'fashioned' to shape in the making, and keeps its shape to the end.

In a Wolsey 'Fashioned' garment you find, at all the 'shaped' parts, certain threads of the texture gradually reduced in number; in men's garments, the calves of the legs, and inner side of the sleeves; in ladies' garments, the under-arms, bust, front and legs.

The machinery for producing this 'Fashioned' Wolsey is very intricate and costly; the work calls for constant vigilance; the resulting garment costs a trifle more than the cut-from-the piece garment, but you'll never want to go back to a 'cut' garment once you've worn the Wolsey 'fashioned' kind.

WOLSEY
PURE WOOL UNDERWEAR

Wolsey de Luxe, Wolsey Fashioned, and Wolsey Hardwear, are three specially recommended qualities. All are made from pure wool; all carry the well-known Wolsey guarantee of free replacement if they shrink.

Unquestionably Best

"Bermaline" is the most nourishing of all breads—brown or white—and certainly the most appetising. The crust is crisp, the crumb is light and spongy and the texture as attractive as that of the finest white bread. It tempts almost every palate.

The combination, desired by every dietarian, of digestibility with nutrition, is accomplished in every "Bermaline" loaf.

You will eat "Bermaline" with enjoyment, digest it with ease, and vote it unquestionably the best of brown breads.

SO EARLY IN THE MORNING
—but not a single shiver

What a luxury on a cold winter's morning to come down to rooms as warm and cosy as though you had been tending fires in them all night!

The luxury is yours if you instal "ESSE" Anthracite Stoves. They do a twenty-four hours' day job for as long as the chilly weather lasts, and make the house really comfortable all the time. And they only require attention once or twice a day.

Experience in both large and small scale installations has proved that "ESSE" Anthracite Stoves provide the most economical and efficient, and also the safest, means of internal household heating. There is nothing to get out of order, and no risk of gas escapes, or sparks from open fires, electric short-circuiting or the like.

"ESSE" Stoves can be fixed without trouble or expense anywhere, and look well in any surroundings.

Ask for a copy of the "Esse" Book from your ironmonger or stove dealer. If in doubt on any point, write us and we shall give you name of nearest merchant.

How to Entertain your Guests

"What shall we do with them?" The question how to entertain one's evening visitors has in the past caused you much anxious thought.

Now, however, the problem solves itself. In every well-ordered home there is a good Wireless Receiver installed. You don't need to entertain your guests; the British Broadcasting Company does that for you.

The one precaution you must take is to get a Receiving-set on whose performance you can rely. You are safe with the Marconiphone, in which are concentrated all the vast resources and unmatched experience of the Marconi Company.

OMO

BLEACHER-CLEANSER-PURIFIER.

SNOWY linen is as necessary to the full enjoyment of a meal as the sauces and condiments which give relish to the appetite—and the linen is snowy where Omo is used, for it is a specialist in making linen really white. Omo removes tea, coffee. and fruit stains. It makes the linen as dazzlingly white as though it had been bleached in the sunshine. Omo contains all the bleaching qualities of pure country air, but the clothes must be boiled to make its oxygen properties fully effective.

NOT FOR COLOURS, WOOLLENS OR FLANNELS.

Mix the OMO in a small basin with sufficient cold water to make a thin cream, using one tablespoonful of OMO for every gallon of water.

Pour contents of basin into cold water in the copper and stir until all the OMO is completely dissolved. Then put in the clothes and bring slowly to the boil, following complete directions on packet

He stooped to pick up her programme and — the spell of her charm was gone forever. Just a fleeting glimpse of a tousled masculine growth of hair through the fine, dainty mesh of her thin silk stockings was enough. It instantly destroyed every illusion of feminine daintiness. Nothing is so repellant and disillusioning to a man. Yet, had she but known the secret of Veet his embarrassing and humiliating discovery would never have been made.

Veet is a perfumed velvety cream that removes hair as if by magic. It is infinitely superior to evil-smelling, irritating depilatories which so often injure the skin. It is far better than scraping razor blades which simply make the hair grow faster and thicker each time they are used.

Whereas razors and ordinary depilatories merely remove hair above the skin surface, Veet melts the hair away beneath it. Veet is as easy to use as a face cream. Just spread it on as it comes from the tube, wait a few minutes, rinse it off and the hair is gone. Veet leaves the skin soft, smooth and white. The many and obvious uses of Veet will appeal to all women. Satisfactory results are guaranteed in every case or money is returned.

Veet may be obtained from all chemists, hairdressers and stores for 3/6. It is also sent post paid in plain wrapper for 4/-. (Trial size by post for 6d. in stamps.) Dae Health Laboratories (Dept. 206 F), 68, Bolsover Street, London, W.1.

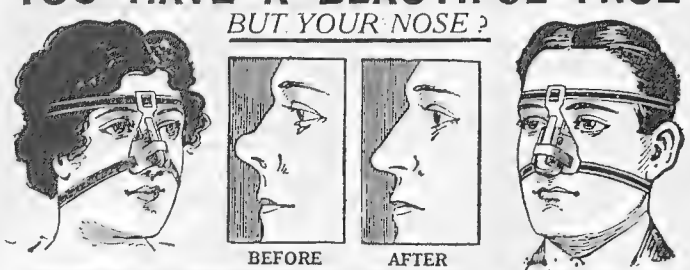
YOU HAVE A BEAUTIFUL FACE

BUT YOUR NOSE?



BEFORE AFTER

A NEW SCIENTIFIC PAINLESS METHOD OF CORRECTING ILL-SHAPED NOSES

IN THIS DAY AND AGE attention to your appearance is an absolute necessity if you expect to make the most out of life. Not only should you wish to appear as attractive as possible, for your own self-satisfaction, which is alone well worth your efforts, but you will find the world in general judging you greatly, if not wholly, by your "looks"; therefore, it pays to "look your best" at all times. Permit no one to see you looking otherwise; it will injure your welfare! Upon the impression you constantly make rests the failure or success of your life. Which is to be your ultimate destiny?

My newest greatly improved superior Nose Shaper, "TRADOS MODEL 25" British Patent, corrects all ill-shaped noses, without operation, quickly, safely, comfortably, and permanently. Diseased cases excepted. Model 25 is the latest in Nose Shapers, and has six adjustable pressure regulators, is made of light polished metal, is firm, and fits every nose comfortably. The inside is upholstered with a fine chamois, and no metal parts come in contact with the skin. Being worn at night it does not interfere with your daily work. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials on hand, and my fifteen years of studying and manufacturing Nose Shapers are at your disposal, which guarantee you entire satisfaction and a perfectly shaped nose. (Above illustration represents my "Trade-Mark" and shows my first and oldest Nose Shaper. It is not a replica of my latest superior Model No. 25.)

Write today for free booklet which tells you how to correct Ill-Shaped Noses without cost if not satisfactory.

THE "VERY" BRUSH for the HAIR

EVERY BRISTLE—
IN EVERY TUFT—
PLAYS ITS PART

Bristles are the most important feature in a hair brush, and are an expensive item in its construction. But best bristles must be utilised to the best advantage when in the tufts of the brush—otherwise they are useless.

it's a HINDES

In most brushes only a few of the bristles—those that stand fractionally higher than the others—perform any real function in brushing the hair. The other bristles form a dense mass that skim over the hair instead of penetrating it right down to the scalp. In every bristle in every tuft plays a part in brushing the hair, the bristle tufts oscillating in unison with the gentle yielding rubber air-cushion in which the tufts are set. There is no tugging—no pulling—no breaking the hair. It is the gentle, pleasing penetration that makes HINDES "VERY" BRUSH just the very brush.

These brushes are obtainable at 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 15s., 18s. 6d. each from the leading Stores, Hairdressers and Chemists throughout the Country, or direct, post free, from Hindes Limited, Patentees and Manufacturers of Hindes Hair Wavers and articles de luxe for the dressing-table, 1, Tabernacle Street, E.C.

Repeating Gramophones, Limited, 102 New Bond St., London W.1

SCORES OF GRAMOPHONE USERS DELIGHTED WITH GREAT INVENTION

The wonderful improvement in tone and quality in every make of gramophone by fitting the "Tremusa"—the perfect sound box—is becoming a matter of general knowledge.

No mica, no steel springs—in place of mica in the diaphragm a NEW CHEMICAL COMPOSITION which gives a FULL, ROUND, MELLOW TONE, faithfully reproducing every detail—a SECOND DIAPHRAGM forms a RESONANCE CHAMBER. In place of steel springs the Tremusa has WHALEBONE. NO harsh sounds, NO shrill thin sounds, NO [illegible], NO scratching. NO hollow or woolly effects. A PERFECT, CLEAR, TRUE REPRODUCTION of the VOICE or INSTRUMENTAL SOLOS or ORCHESTRAL MUSIC. The Tremusa requires no adjustments and is unaffected by atmospheric temperature or moisture.

Read what Experts think of it.

Mr. Adrian Boult, Director of the London Symphony Orchestra: "In my opinion it is the best sound box on the market."

Sir Hugh P. Allen, Director of the Royal College of Music: "Clearer than anything I have heard."

Mr. Alan R. Fenn: "As much ahead of anything existing hitherto as the flat disc gramophone was ahead of the wax cylinder phonograph."

THE "TREMUSA" SOUND BOX

Eliminating the "work" from Needlework . . .

DO you know that you can sew by electricity—with both hands free to guide the work—on your present hand or treadle Machine? You can—and one little screw permanently fixes the simple Singer attachment which makes this possible.

Fit a SINGER Electric Bracket Type Motor to your Machine—and Sew without effort!

Once fitted it needs no further attention. Sewing is then merely a matter of plugging in to an electric lamp socket and switching on the current; no need to touch the hand wheel—it starts itself.

EFFICIENT SERVICE
WITHOUT COSTLY UPKEEP

YOU can have all the advantages usually found in expensive homes at a very small cost by fitting the "Domestikatum" Boiler. When installed, the "Domestikatum" looks like an ordinary fire grate, but the back and sides form units of a most highly efficient boiler.

The Domestikatum Boiler

supplies plentiful hot water for baths, washing etc., and central heating mains for drying rooms and greenhouses. The "Domestikatum" has fewer working parts and makes more heat from a given quantity of fuel than any other boiler. Its modern design ensures an attractive appearance, and easy to manage. The Decca combines extraordinary compactness and portability with a musical quality that is truly astonishing. Many enthusiastic gramophone owners prefer it to their large and costly Cabinet, for quality of tone, for volume and for clearness. Thousands find it preferable because of the added convenience of compactness and portability.

The Decca is the pioneer "portable" and entirely different in construction from any other. Its distinctive features are patented and cannot be copied. Recent improvements greatly add to its value, and its superiority is now more pronounced than ever.

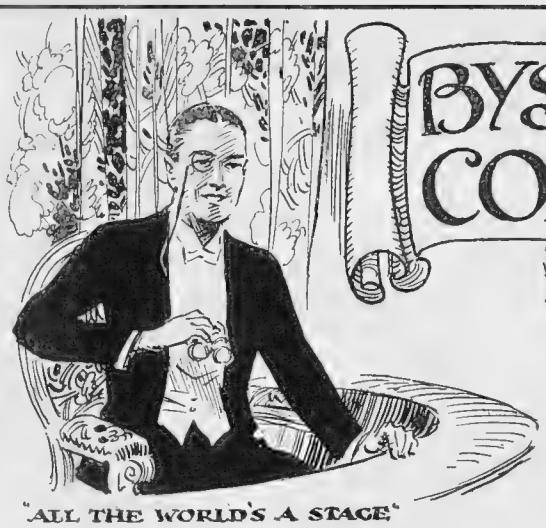
BYSTANDER COMMENTS



"ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE"

"A WEARY, DREARY, MUSHY SLUSHY MONTH"

A Much-Maligned Month

EVEN the most stony-hearted of us is melted by a plea for the under-dog, for the man who has never had a chance. I beg to lay before you, then, the case of one who, throughout a long career, has invariably received all the kicks and none of the ha'pence. The time has come when justice must be done, and if my client is too diffident to speak for himself, I intend to speak for him. Therefore, kind ladies and gentlemen, I crave your kindly sympathy for that much-maligned fellow—the month of November.

What's Yours?

POOR old Nov! Was there ever such a dog with a bad name? Sometimes I like to fancy that certain months are the spiritual property of certain people. December, for instance, with its holly and crackling logs, and Pickwickian cheer, obviously belongs to Dickens; and whimsical April, with her tears and laughter, is clearly Barrie's month. But who would own November? "Dean Inge," snaps the cynic, before I can get the words out of my mouth. "A dull month," sneers the cynic, "a foggy month, a weary, dreary, slushy month!"

I Wax Lyrical

BUT is he? Say what you will, you can't deny that November is an honest sort of month. At least, he never pretends to be what he isn't.

Come, let us sing the praises of
The bluff old honest month of Nov.
Why should we fall for leafy June
Simply because she rhymes with moon?
July may fill our bowls with roses,
But then she also skins our noses.
As we remember, to our cost,
That January's one long frost.
We dread the lures of treach'rous May
To throw our undervests away.
But honest Nov. no promise makes
And—Q. E. D.—no promise breaks.
Mid mist and mire and sleet and rain
His motto's ever "Penny plain,"
And though his fogs be thick and yellow
He is an honest English fellow.

Back to Blighty

YOU take the word of the man from the Outposts, the lean, bronzed Britisher, who runs our Empire for us under burning tropical skies. When his leave-boat noses her way up the London river, through a regular pea-soup fog, does he pine for spicy breezes and sun-kissed palms? No, sir. He snuffs the dank November air and chuckles: "A real London particular! Good old England! Now, I know I'm home!" But, of course, even Novembers are not what they used to be. "They never were," snarls my cynic. . . . Oh, yes, they were.

"GOOD OLD ENGLAND! NOW I KNOW I'M HOME"

A Lament

WHY, when I was a boy, years ago—business with wheel-chair and ear-trumpet—I remember going out one foggy afternoon to post a letter. The flap of the pillar-box was incredibly stiff, and by the time I had achieved my object, the fog cleared. Judge my amazement when I discovered that I had been endeavouring to insert my missive between the collar and neck of a scarlet-coated Grenadier Guardsman on sentry-go. Ah, yes, we have no fogs like that nowadays. And what about the glorious Fifth? Where are the bonfires of yesteryear? Where are the miniature Brock's Benefits which used annually to burn patches out of our lawn?

BYSTANDER COMMENTS (concluded)

comedy bomb. It is a sad loss. There is no romance left in anarchy. Our modern revolutionaries are dull, respectable fellows, who would rather make a lot of little noises on the floor of the House of Commons than one good, big, decisive one underneath it. No longer do we burn our notorieties in effigy. And why not? The answer (lamentable but true) is simply this: that our notorieties, like Mrs. Harris, the newsboy's apple-core and the rich fruit of contemporary lyricism, have no concrete existence. Yea, verily, we have none.

Degenerate Days

MR. LLOYD GEORGE is smoking the pipe of peace in some far Western wigwam. Mr. Beckett (J.) is retiring to a quieter life—possibly (rumour has it) as a commercial traveller, in which profession he will find that his "rounds" of necessity last longer than fifteen seconds. Tishy has folded her forelegs for ever. And Papyrus . . . but that is a sore subject. Some of us make a living by putting our thoughts on paper; others by putting our paper-money on Papyrus. It is a hard life for all of us. But the dismal fact remains that we have no notorieties left worth the trouble of burning on the Fifth. These are degenerate days. . . degenerate days.

On the List

I SEE that Mr. Baldwin—we were talking of bluff, honest fellows, weren't we?—has declared himself in favour of Protection. I agree. Certainly, I agree. There are many evils, unfortunately omitted from the Litany from which we may reasonably crave some measure of protection.

A high tariff wall I should like to see
Built betwixt certain things and me;
Treacly films and pyjama-plays
And each acrobatic new ball-room craze;
Italian tenors with throaty tones
And all record-breaking gramophones;
Pussyfoot orators, eager to roar,
And epics just written by Willie (aged four);
German measles and Spanish 'flu
Should be heavily taxed, I think . . . Don't you?

The Terrors of Tuning-in—

AND there is another terror from which we may shortly have to plead protection. No tariff will help us. It will be at our doors; nay, within our very drawing-rooms. It will be a terror that walketh, or, any rate, talketh by night—between the hours of seven and ten-thirty. This is no less than the dire threat that Parliamentary debates may be broadcasted. Can frightfulness go farther? Is the peace of our fair homes to be shattered by the crash of flying Hansards, hurled by unruly Members at the Speaker?

—And the Turn of the Worm

SURELY it is time that we made a stand against this last blow to the pathetic belief that an Englishman's home is his castle. I will not listen in. Much as I might benefit by a linguistic course, ably conducted by the Member for Silvertown, I will not listen in. Much as I appreciate my Bedtime Story, I flatly decline to receive it from the lips of Lord Curzon. Even though medical advice assures me that gas is a sure preventative for whooping-cough, I will not . . . will not . . . listen in. I would rather have whooping-cough. No, gentlemen. If we are to suffer "A House of Commons in Every Home," that body will richly deserve its amended title of "The Mother-in-Law of Parliaments."

From the Cape to Bond Street

PROTECTION reminds me of Preference and a gay night at the Embassy Club last week. Towards the end of the excellent repast that Luigi conjures up from a magic kitchen, I found myself playing with those petites foursomes—or whatever they call them—which make equally good nibble-icks with coupe jacques or afternoon tee. I took one and bit through the sugar coating. Delicious! Strange flavour, but somehow familiar? Of course. Cape gooseberries, which make that delicious South African jam.

The Empire and the Embassy

HOW had they got to the Embassy? I wondered if they were a present from General Smuts, and put eager questions to a busy waiter. He was nonplussed. He summoned other waiters, who in turn collected their confrères.

By CHARLES GRAVE

"THE NEXT BIG FIGHT: THE "VETERANS"

Apparently the delicacy was called Phisuit—with "phis" short as in soda-water. And it came all the way from Japan. But I am still unconvinced; they are Cape gooseberries. Why shouldn't the famous dance club set the lead and call them Confiture Jannie Smuts?

Language no Barrier

IT is almost impossible to translate dialect. But Messrs. Payot, of Paris, not at all appalled by the enormity of the task, have recently made an ingenious effort with a dictionary called "Le Slang," which for twelve francs tells the young French idea all the Cockney words he should know—and some of those he shouldn't. Some of the sporting terms appear to be somewhat difficult of translation in the Language of Diplomacy. Thus we learn that a "yorker" is Une balle bîlée droit sur le guichet; and that "plus-fours" are culotte bouffante des joueurs de golf et des rowingwomen. But, as I said before, it is very ingenious. And I've learnt lots of new words

WHO, WHEN & WHERE

BY THE BYSTANDER IN SOCIETY

Royal Doings

THE Court has seldom been so gay in the autumn. The visit of the Overseas Prime Ministers, and the two Royal weddings have necessitated entertaining, unusual at this time of year. At the afternoon party, given by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, "for the representatives of the Dominions and of India," there was an innovation in entertainments of this kind. Each guest was presented to their Majesties in the Long Gallery. It had all the formality of a Court set in a delightful atmosphere of informality.

Then there was the dinner-party for the King of Sweden and the bridal couple, the pomp and circumstance of the wedding at St. James's, and the reception at Kensington Palace.

This week the King is paying his annual shooting visit to Lord Iveagh at Elveden, which has some of the best coverts in England, and a wonderful marble entrance hall. Next week there will be Princess Maud's wedding to Lord Carnegie at the Guard's Chapel, Wellington Barracks, preceded by a party which the Princess Royal is giving at St. James's Palace, therein following the precedent set at the marriage of Lady Patricia Ramsay. The King will give his niece away. After their marriage, Princess Maud and Lord Carnegie will live in Belgrave Square in the house formerly occupied by Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, who will go to the house in Grosvenor Square left to Princess Arthur by Lord Farquhar, when they return from South Africa.

Princess Mary has given up her intention to hunt this winter with the Bramham Moor, of which Lord Lascelles is Master. She will spend the greater part of the winter at Goldsborough Hall, and will doubtless be present at the meets.

AN ORATORY WEDDING

Mr. J. S. Charlton and his bride, formerly Lady June Butler, photographed after their wedding at the Oratory, Brompton, last week. Lady June, who is the younger daughter of the Earl and Countess of Carrick, is well-known as a poetess of unusual merit

The Duke and Duchess of York have taken a hunting-box in Northamptonshire, and the Prince of Wales is expected at Melton Mowbray soon after he has cleared off a long list of public engagements. Whether Prince Henry will be able to hunt this season still seems a little doubtful. He may not be able to stand the strain upon his injured leg.

The New Governor-General

NOTHING could have been happier or more popular than the choice of the Queen's brother, the Earl of Athlone, and Princess Alice, to succeed Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught in South Africa. But South Africa's gain is London's loss, and those who are connected with the many charities in which the Princess is interested, and for which she works so indefatigably, are filled with dismay. It will be difficult to find anyone to take her place.

Lord Athlone has proved himself one of the best chairmen the Middlesex Hospital has ever had, so there is dismay likewise in that institution.

Lady May Cambridge, who is completing her education in Paris, will accompany her parents to South Africa in January, a circumstance which disposes of the tactless story of her probable betrothal to her second cousin, the heir to the Norwegian throne.

Royal Pro-Consuls

THE appointment of members of the Royal Family to represent the Sovereign in the Dominions, draws the ties of blood and Empire more closely together. Queen Victoria realised this when she sent the late Duke of Argyll (then Marquis of Lorne) and Princess Louise to Canada. And, perhaps, the whole history of Ireland might have been different if a member of the Royal House had served as Viceroy.

Disraeli realised the effect of such an appointment upon the Irish people, and was anxious that the Duchess of Teck, the Queen's mother, should be Vicereine of Ireland. He made the suggestion to the Duchess one night at dinner at the Baroness Burdett-Coutts's house in Stratton Street—one of the many historical things which happened in that house, now so begrimed and derelict.

The Duchess knew Queen Victoria's intense dislike of women taking part in public affairs—unless, as in her own case, they were born to it—and begged Disraeli never to mention the matter again. But Disraeli was a wise and far-seeing person, and if his wish could have come to pass, the Duchess of Teck would have been the most popular pro-Consul England ever had anywhere.

Socialism Up-to-date

THE monde, I think, is not quite so interested in the doings of Lady Warwick as it used to be, but her adoption as a Labour candidate by a constituency in the county from which her husband takes his title, has caused considerable amusement. In former days, when Lady Warwick was an outstanding figure in English Society, it would have caused a thrill of horror. So you see how things change.

Lady Warwick, whose entertainments in London, at Warwick Castle and at Easton vied in lavish splendour with those of the richest Americans, is now the sworn foe of capitalism. She told the electors at Leamington that "capitalism is tottering to its end," and "the sooner we get rid of it the better."

I don't know whether the private company which once ran the Warwick estates—the late Duke of Sutherland was one of the shareholders—is still in existence, but that company and the Warwick estates together represented a considerable amount of "capitalism."

Lady Warwick has lived by "capitalism" all her life. She inherited a large fortune from her father, and married a man of not inconsiderable means. So perhaps her theory now is "Après moi, le déluge!"

A Popular Ambassador

FEW Ambassadors have left happier recollections behind them than Mr. Harvey. The position of American Ambassador in these days is not a particularly easy one when diplomacy is still busy clearing up the aftermath of the War. But Mr. Harvey by his tact, wisdom, and keen commonsense has smoothed over many difficulties. Princess Louise presided at the farewell luncheon given to Mrs. Harvey at the American Women's Club, a day or two before she and her husband sailed for America. Socially, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey will be greatly missed.

Poppy Day

THIS year the police have made stringent rules concerning the sale of poppies on Poppy Day. The ladies who responded to Lord Haig's appeal for sellers will not be allowed to walk about the streets, but must remain in the places allotted to them. Nor are sellers to be allowed in the auditorium of the theatres, or, with a few exceptions, in the dining-rooms of restaurants. These measures are taken for everybody's protection.

A Cenotaph in Sound

THE Government has made a popular decision on the question of a Cenotaph service. But many thousands, on Armistice Day, will find their way to the Albert Hall, where John Fould's "World Requiem" will be given by some distinguished soloists and a chorus and orchestra of a thousand performers. Lest any of our readers have forgotten, we would recall the fact that the performance—which starts at 8 p.m.—is in aid of Lord Haig's Appeal Fund.

Economies of the Rich

YOU oughtn't to scoff at people's little weaknesses, but it is difficult not to be amused by some of the economies practised by the really and truly rich. Some of them take the oddest forms and are in such petty things that the economy is no economy at all.

For instance, I know a very rich man who cannot bear old electric-light bulbs to be thrown away. He keeps them in a cupboard in his study, and all those with the faintest particle of burning left in them he uses in his dressing-room. He gets quite an occupation out of changing them.

There's a millionaire who entertains largely. His cook is a cordon bleu; his wines are irreproachable.

A RECENT ENGAGEMENT

Lord Esmé Gordon-Lennox and his fiancée, Miss Rosamond Palmer, daughter of Vice-Admiral Norman C. Palmer, whose engagement has been announced. Lord Esmé is the second son of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon

He has guests always in his houses, whether in London or the country. Yet although he is a fairly heavy cigarette-smoker himself it is gall and wormwood to him to give a cigarette to his guests. At luncheon and dinner cigarettes are handed round with the coffee, one cigarette for each guest—that is all, never any cigars. After the single one offered, the guests smoke their own cigarettes, and the usual box in the smoking-room is "conspicuous by its absence," as lady novelists used to say, in this millionaire's country house.

This, of course, must be an economy, and is in strong contrast with the household of another millionaire, where not only a box of cigarettes is provided in every bedroom, male and female, but postage stamps and six different kinds of scented soaps as well!

The economies of the rich are not a matter of to-day. The Duke of Westminster's great-grandfather, the second Marquis of Westminster, was so "careful" that he tore off all unwritten-upon half-sheets of letters he received and used them for his own correspondence. His servants were constantly leaving because they were half-starved, and his eight daughters never had a fire in their nursery or schoolroom in the coldest weather. One of them said, "A vivid recollection of my childhood is the terror of the winters. My hands were always red and swollen with chilblains, and my arms, in the short-sleeved dresses we wore then, were always blue with cold. We must have been a hardy set of children or we should all have died of pneumonia." The eight blue-elbowed girls lived, everyone of them, into their late seventies and eighties, so the régime apparently suited them.

The Fernie Hunt

THIS economical Marquis of Westminster had two sons. The elder became the first Duke of Westminster and grandfather of the present holder of the title. The second son, Lord Richard Grosvenor, was created Lord Stalbridge, which, for that unknown reason which gives so many English words a pronunciation utterly different from their spelling, is called "Stawlbridge."

His son, the present Lord Stalbridge, has just taken over the Mastership of the Fernie Hounds, which were run under the joint Mastership of Mrs. Walter Faber and Mrs. Fernie. Lord Stalbridge used

A New Industry

A NEW industry seems to be cropping up amongst owners of good-sized London houses who are hit and hampered in their pockets by high taxation and low incomes. On more than one occasion lately I have heard of people letting their houses for wedding receptions. The word "let," of course, takes to itself an extra letter when it appears in the wedding account in the newspapers. There, we all read it as "lent."

People who hire other people's houses for a wedding reception say that it is cheaper than having the reception at an hotel. It is certainly pleasanter and more comfortable. The owner, if she is in London, walks out in the morning, leaving the house just as it stands—if she is wise and careful she puts away all the silver and knick-knacks in the drawing-room.

The hirer does the rest, generally through a refreshment contractor, who provides everything at so much a head. Beyond a couple of bedrooms for the bride and bridegroom to change in before going away, only the reception rooms are used—really an easy way of earning the cheque which varies in amount according to the size of the house.

The refreshment people work so quickly that the owner can return to her abode in the evening. If the wedding presents are shown, the charge, I believe, is higher, as that means giving up one room several days beforehand, and all the fuss of the presents being brought and taken away.

The Stag and its Cost

THE people who proudly show you the head of the stag, carefully mounted, and with the date and place of killing in gold letters beneath, which they shot whilst on a visit to Scotland, do not always realise the cost of that trophy to their host if he has rented a forest.

Deer forests are let on a basis of £30 a head for stags, the number of which to be killed by the tenant is strictly limited. The number varies, of course, according to the size of the forest. But although the owner receives a rental on the £30 a head rate, each stag actually costs the tenant at least £20 more, when you take all his other expenses into consideration. So the guest who brings down a royal or a heavy stag ought to be exceedingly grateful to his host.

"Honour Satisfied"

THE Duke of Camastra, who has recently been wounded in a duel near Paris, is the only brother of the Prince of Tralia, the head of one of the oldest families in Sicily, dating back to the thirteenth century. In his younger days the Duke, who is now sixty, was considered one of the handsomest men in Italy, and his bonnes fortunes used to excite a good deal of envious chatter in the clubs at Rome and Palermo.

Eighteen years ago he married the beautiful Mlle. Ney d'Elchingen, an heiress, a descendant of the great Marshal Ney, and a close friend and protégée of the Empress Eugènie. The ducal title of Camastra is one of the twenty-eight titles borne by the Prince of Tralia, and is used by its present holder as we use courtesy titles in England. Five days after his marriage in 1905 he was created Duke Lanza (the family name of the Tralias), a title which would have been inherited by his eldest son if there had been any issue of the marriage.

SOUTH AFRICA'S NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Photographs Speaight

The latest portraits of the Earl and Countess of Athlone. They will leave this country in January, when the Earl will take up his duties as Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Union of South Africa in succession to Prince Arthur of Connaught

WHO, WHEN AND WHERE (concluded)

The Duke of Camastra's sister is a Roman Princess and an English peeress, her husband, Prince Guistiniani-Bandini, being Earl of Newburgh in our peerage. It will be remembered that a little while ago the Prince and Princess were drugged by some of their servants whilst they were asleep, and robbed of many thousand pounds' worth of jewels.

Lord Stamfordham

THE rumours that Lord Stamfordham will shortly resign his post as private secretary to the King still persist. If this should be true, the loss to the King will be a heavy one. Lord Stamfordham, who is seventy-four, has given forty-three years of unbroken service to Queen Victoria and to King George.

So long ago as 1880, as Captain Arthur Bigge, he was appointed assistant private secretary to Queen Victoria, and was trained under that most tactful and wise of private secretaries, the late Sir Henry Ponsonby, whom he succeeded fifteen years later. He was Queen Victoria's private secretary for six years, and at her death was appointed to the same position with the present King when Prince of Wales, and has served His Majesty in that capacity ever since. A year after the King's accession Lord Stamfordham's devoted labours to the Crown were rewarded with a barony. His only son was killed during the War.

The post of private secretary to the Monarch calls for capacity and tact of the highest order. Matters of the highest national and political importance pass through his hands, and, as someone once said, "The King's private secretary must have the secretiveness of the oyster, the knowledge of a Prime Minister and the tact of a woman of the world."

If Lord Stamfordham should resign, Colonel Clive Wigram, the King's assistant private secretary, will probably be his successor.

Dr. Bettini's Photographs

IF you want to see how photographs can be made into charming pictures I should advise you to pay a visit to the Vasari Gallery at the Portman Square end of Wigmore Street, where Dr. Bettini is having an exhibition of his very original work with the camera. The arrangement of landscape behind some of the photographs introduces an entirely new note.

The photographs of Puccini, Mascagni and Mussolini are particularly striking, and the last, in writing an appreciation of Dr. Bettini's work, dates his letter "In the first year of the Fascisti Revolution." A letter from Gabriele d'Annunzio shows that the great Italian writer can be poetical even when writing about photographs—but, then, he was writing about Dr. Bettini's.

Is the Brain a Camera?

WISE and scientific folk tell us that the brain is a sort of photographic machine, recording pictures and scenes exactly like a camera. Perhaps they are right, perhaps they are wrong. But let me tell you of an odd remembrance that came to me just through reading the announcement of a death in a newspaper.

Umpteen and something years ago—I'm not going to tell you how long, because age never gets the respect given to a vintage port—I went to Egypt. Being young and venturesome, I went all the way by sea. At Marseilles, amongst the passengers who joined the ship was a pleasant and handsome baronet. We made acquaintance at table. He told me that he and his wife had gone out to Egypt two months before, that he had had to return to England on important business, but luckily had caught a ship a week ahead of the time he thought he could get back.

Two days out from Marseilles there was great excitement. We passed close to our own sister-ship coming from Alexandria, so close that you could have thrown a stone on board. Of course, we all rushed to the taffrail. The people on the sister-ship did ditto. Waving hands, shouts, on both ships. Apart from the others, and near the stern, were a man and woman. She was holding the man's arm.

"My God!" said the baronet, who was standing beside me, "that's my wife!"

He returned to England by the next steamer from Alexandria, and in due course I saw in the newspapers that he had divorced his wife. But I had forgotten the incident until I read the announcement of his death a few days ago.

"Guy Fawkes' Day"

LONDON, November 5

DEAR COUSIN—

MANY things are happening this week. There's the Motor Show for one, that started last Friday and's still going strong. Lord Mayor's Show, too, coming along in a day or two, as organised for the very first time on record by Mr. Charles B. Cochran—otherwise, of course, 'twouldn't be worth even mentioning. And theatres and lunches and dinners and dances ad lib, and even, to-day as ever is, by the way, that once celebrated occasion that we've now almost completely forgotten, but the infant population's sure to remind us of—Guy Fawkes' Day.

卐

BUT not one of them, somehow, seems to matter one little bit once we remember (as who doesn't ?) that much bigger thing than any new party or ancient celebration—Armistice Day. Two days it'll be really, 'cos the 11th is Sunday, but Saturday's to be Remembrance Day, the day when all through London will be sold those poppies that for the people of old days meant sleep and forgetfulness, but for us all an everlasting memorial of the gallant dead, the dear, brave, heroic fighters whose fight ceased so suddenly just five years ago.

卐

AND on all the streets poppies will be sold, and when we go to dine at the Carlton to watch Vincent Davico and his graceful partner, Doreen Read, do their exhibition dances, or at the Ritz or the Berkeley or Prince's or the Savoy, and on to dance at Ciro's and the Embassy and the Metropole Follies and the Queen's Hall Roof and the Empress Rooms—there on our tables will be, to remind us, if any of us perchance (how could we ?) forget — those poppies that now each summer wave and float and peacefully nod and blow—

> Between the crosses, row on row,

Where our dear men lie—sleeping and forgetful, let's hope—

> In Flanders fields.

卐

FOR if only they could have known that it would be like this five years after. . . . "Ex-service men," as they call them, rather contemptuous-like, nipping on to these very poppies (in memory of their own little affair) as a means of livelihood, and very glad to get the job, too. . . . Tho' even that little privilege, these rash and impetuous lads who went and actually fought in the late War are not, apparently, going to have all their own way. Heaps and heaps of Armistice Day poppies, it seemeth, have been constructed by private speculators, and, what's more—well, hardly b'live it, could you ? But—masses more have act'lly been dumped here, for the very same purpose, by . . . the Huns ! ! ! !

"Buying poppies"

卐

STILL, never mind—it doesn't really matter, does it ? I mean, not worth while worrying, is it, when a big thing happens, about what the little people may think and say and do ? In the presence of real tragedy, all the minor mutterings just fade away. And if November 11, 1918, isn't an occasion worth celebrating with just a moment or two's silence—and even, perhaps, an hour or two's thought—I don't altogether quite know what is.

卐

THOSE men, dear cousin, those wonderful men—I'm sure the men of to-day would do just the same, of course—but they were so marvellous, so young and so calm, so cheerful and so self-sacrificing, so fearless, even the ones who realised right to the very uttermost bit what they were up against. And always, to us (weren't they ?), so quite entirely and modestly forgetful that there ever had been or was or would be such a thing as a relentless, conscienceless, infinitely cruel and utterly unspeakable war. A war that would kill all patriotism but the very finest and most wonderful—oh ! if people only knew. . . .

卐

WELL, if they did know and remember, don't s'pose there'd ever be any more wars. But men somehow don't seem to remember, and it's they, isn't it, who make the wars. They don't remember, dear things, they're so busy always over something or other, but we women do. They don't remember, and I'm glad they don't, because they've got the world's work to perform and accomplish.

卐

BUT you and I, who've got nothing to do in all the whole, wide universe but buy books and hats, and go to parties, and write letters to each other (n'est ce pas ?), we, at least, have the leisure, and what someone calls the luxury of grief, to recall just a few memories of those gallant sleepers of ours. As one of the war poets wrote—

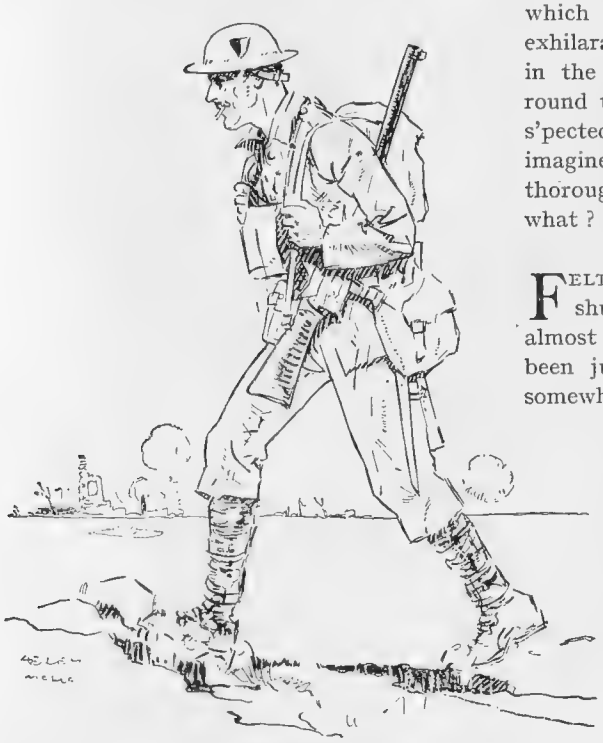
Ye sleepers, who will sing you ?
We can but give our tears.
Ye dead men, who can bring you
Fame in the coming years ?



"Those heroic men"

Do they need, d'you think, anyone to bring them fame ? Their fame, methinks, is as surely established as the writer's of that verse I've just been quoting from—Mr. R. E. Vernède, the gallant poet who, before he went to the War, used to write for THE BYSTANDER. "Brave souls," he wrote, "but who remembers" . . .

The flame that fired your embers ?
Deep, deep the sleep that holds you,
Who one time had no peers.

卐

I DON'T b'lieve, though, dear cousin, that everybody really forgets—'spite of the fact that it's rather the fashion 'parently, 'mong some of the tottery old men and the very young ones, to pretend that there never was a war. There's Gilbert Frankau, f'rinstance, who went through it all himself, and as an eminent novelist of the moment, may, perhaps, be excused for talking about the affair.

卐

"HOW can we rest ?" he asks—

How can we rest
Knowing it all unaccomplished,
The vow that was dear to us dying ?
How can we sleep or be still ? . . .
Ye that remain,
Have ye no pity
For us that are sped . . . ?

卐

PLEASE don't think, though, dear cousin, that just 'cos I happen to remember five years ago I'm an altogether melancholy and reminiscent person. Far from it. Have just been revelling indeed, truth to tell, in a d'lightfully mysterious mystery play (at the Comedy Theatre of all places), called The Last Warning, which is full of all sorts of the most exhilarating kind of thrills, culminating in the presence of real p'licemen all round the stalls and pit, to arrest the s'pected murderer . . . you can just imagine, can't you, what a really thoroughly jolly evening we spent, what ?

卐

FELT, at the end of all the shivers and shudders, you know, as if I'd almost just as soon or very nearly have been just round the corner—in fact, somewhere round in the d'rection of the celebrated Lyons' Corner House, which may or may not always have been an entirely modish spot, but has now most certainly asserted its claims to be among the places of the moment, if only for the reason of having invented the very first combination of meals with real grand opera that ever was.

卐

LOVELY melodies I listened to there, while I toyed leisurely with my homard à la crême (or whatever they call it) and chicken salad and other lovely confections, all (the melodies, I mean) from all the most beloved operas, Faust, Trovatore, Rigoletto, and the rest. And really heard them quite well, even above the clattering of the knives and forks.

卐

HUNTING'S begun, the leaves are falling busily—such as remain—and people are beginning to talk of winter sports. It's November now, the chilly month, that means the beginning of the end. But, as some one said . . .

Our November will be their April, our Autumn will be their Spring. . . . For us the fall of the leaves will always be a symbol of glorious youth marching like a bridegroom to the nuptials of death, to the bridal of the grave. . . .

卐

SO let's be proud and glad, and not in the least sorry or sad, these Armistice Days. Let's revel gaily and freely, paying our tribute the while to the men who once saved England to their great and glorious memory. They'd like it to be that way, wouldn't they ?

With love,
yours ever,
BLANCHETTE

Old and Bold

Old firms are proverbially, if not actually, conservative. Some, however, manage very successfully to keep abreast of the time, and a favoured few even to keep ahead of the old gentleman with a scythe. Thus, with Keith Prowse, whose activities as theatrical ticket agents are so well known. Take their music publishing and instrumental departments, for instance. Though established for over 140 years these enterprising people are well in the van with "Blues" and all those other signs of syncopation which, as someone says, "are England's punishment for losing the American colonies." In fact, "You want next season's dances—We have them" could find an equal place of honour with the firm's other well-known slogan. Recently, by the way, Keith Prowse have been appointed sole agents in this country for Messrs. Couesnon and Co., the celebrated French musical instrument makers, who supply the famous Garde Republicaine Band with all their instruments.

"The Frogs" or "Oh! for an Hour of Aristophanes"

CHORUS: Mighty is the business and constant are the rumbling and the ruffling amongst the holders of office in the Archonship of Stanley Baldwin. Therefore it will be a difficult task to paint accurately when both sides strive and strain for an advancement in the world, be it of power or money. Let us make a bold attempt to say something subtle and clever. If ignorance be the spectator, so as not to understand the subtleties, let ignorance go hang. You who understand, go through all and don't fear.

ARCHON: Well now, let us consider the behaviour of these Frogs, and particularly that of the Chief Frog, Poincaré.

CHORUS: Whatever you have to say, state it. Attack, rip up both what is old and what is new. And say what you are going to do about the Irish loyalists.

ARCHON: I have never heard of them.

CHORUS: Whatever will be the event? Must the man talk only of the French Frogs?

ARCHON: My idea is that we should have a grand conference at a nice seaside place and ask each other how much Germany can pay.

CHORUS: Here is a man most painstaking. But this, again, is somewhat strange, for when the British owed many millions to America there was no seaside conference to inquire concerning the British taxpayers' ability to pay. By the deity, I would not have believed that so inquiring a man should have missed such a beautiful opportunity for an inquiry. Perpend and let us inquire of him.

ARCHON: Now, by Apollo, I would not give a fig for a seaside conference concerning anybody's ability to pay without inviting Uncle Sam, the world's greatest authority on the ability to receive.

CHORUS: Know you this man's uncle? He is a teetotaller and is very angry with England because England sends him whisky and gin. Would that he had prudence and understanding, and realised that the way to stop rum-running is to stop buying rum.

ARCHON: Uncle Sam knows more than any living man about collecting obols, and it is no use our conducting this inquiry without the presence of an expert.

CHORUS: Here is a strange thing. For does not Lord Robert Cecil tell us that his League of Nations is a beautiful success, although America has boycotted it? Why, then, cannot an inquiry about German finance be successful without American help? Guardian god of the chorus, come down from Olympus and pinch us for fear that we may not be awake.

ARCHON: Of course, I quite realise that we are going to have trouble with the Frogs. Germany will plead that she has no money and we shall believe her. But the Frogs will not. I shall ask the Chief Frog to think it over once, twice and thrice.

CHORUS: And know you not what the Frogs will reply to you?

ARCHON: Tell me swiftly.

CHORUS: Brekekex, coax, coax. They are a song-loving race.

ARCHON: That is very rude. I don't expect them to admit the possession of bananas, but if they croak in my face I shall march on Paris with General Smuts.

CHORUS: It is recorded that when a certain visitor to Paris was asked if he had seen Smuts, he replied in the negative, explaining that his wife had been with him, but what that has to do with this particular play you must ask Aristophanes.

ARCHON: Smuts is a great authority on Franco-German relations. He thinks it would be exceedingly helpful if I gave Poincaré a good hard slap.

CHORUS: Gracious King Edward, O highly honoured lover of Peace, lover of France, who now dwellest in the abodes of to-morrow, come down, we pray, and pull back these maniacs by the ears. Get in touch with Conan Doyle, or Marshall-Hall, or Robert Blatchford, or any other deeply receptive person, and let us know what you think about it all.

ARCHON: If we go pottering along as we are——

CHORUS: You have said it. You are the most pottering potterer that ever pottered. Zeus save Briton from potterers that potter so potterfully as you potter.

[At this point the Mêchanê, or Machine, is employed. It consists of a sort of crane with pulley attached, by which a god or hero can be lowered from heaven to earth. Hence the phrase "Deus ex machinâ." In this case the hero from the machine is King Edward.]

ARCHON: Ah, your majesty, you arrive opportunely. Let me tell you how badly the Frogs have been behaving since you left the earth.

KING EDWARD: Archon, I know the French. You do not. The French know the Germans. You do not. The Germans owe much money to France and England, but will not pay. France has Germany by the leg, and will not release her hold till she gets her money. Don't you realise what a simpleton you are not to grab hold of the other leg?

[Exit Archon.]

CHORUS: Raise yourselves aloft! Io! Evae! We will drink, we will eat to King Edward. Evae! Evae! Skip along the sand, ye nationals of a sea-girt isle, ye brothers of shrimps; whirl round the foot swiftly and let everyone fling up his toes to kick the anti-Frogs out of office. Whirl round, advance in a circle, fling your leg sky-high, let gyrations be made. For King Edward, your father, has put Stanley Baldwin on the carpet and ticked him off for ever and ever. Evae! Evae! Brekekex, coax, coax!

[Exeunt omnes, dancing.]

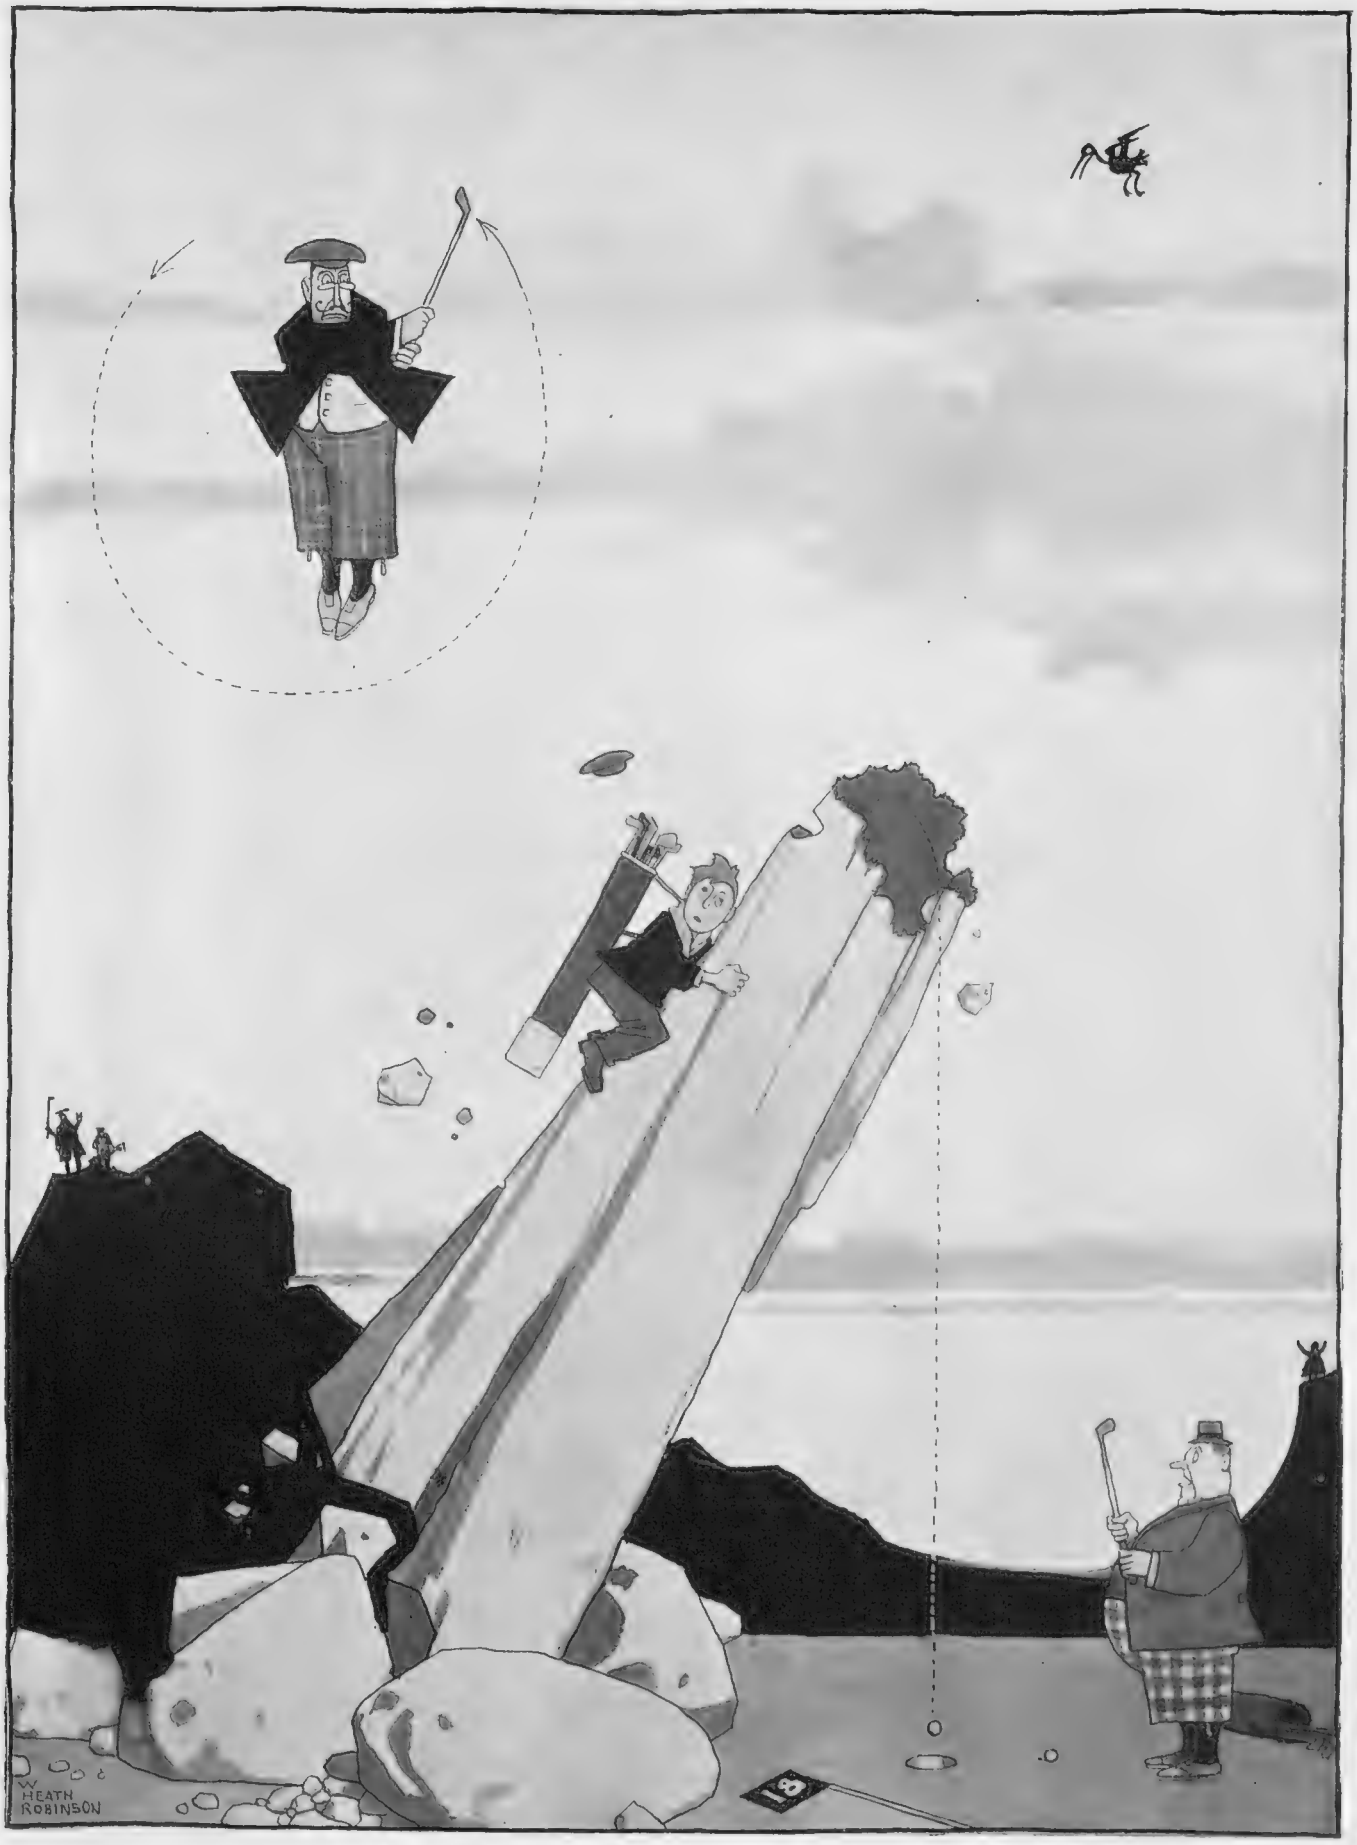
A Hefty Slice



BY W. HEATH ROBINSON

THE TRAGEDY OF THE TOO-VIGOROUS PUTT

By "JINGLE"

Illustrated by MACMICHAEL

Produced October 13, 1923.

THIS is a play written in the style of the popular novelette, wherein the character that is uncommonly good is set in sharp contrast to the character that is incredibly bad, for the sake of giving free play to the primitive emotions. The story is, however, brilliantly redeemed from the commonplace by the impressive acting of Miss Sybil Thorndike, who, with her superb art, galvanises the dry bones of mediocrity and makes of them a living thing. We have, first of all, to consider Sir Robert Shale, Bart., of Shale Abbey, a richly humorous performance by Mr. O. B. Clarence. The Abbey is falling into ruins; but the old man, like some other people in Europe, has no money for reparations. He has, in fact, nothing much except his proud boast that it took six hundred years to make a man like himself, which provokes the not inapt comment that that was a waste of time. It is, of course, the retort obvious; but it is quite modern in its form of humour. Subtlety in humour would appear to be no longer a paying concern; and as this is a play that will obviously appeal to the multitude, the wind must be tempered to the shorn lamb.

SIR ROBERT has two grown-up granddaughters, one of whom is wise and the other foolish. Elinor, the wise one, is admired by Gerald Forster, a man of property, who is also an engineer engaged in damming Egypt, or something of that sort. He is clearly about to propose to her when someone else comes into the room and interrupts the ceremony. This, by the way, is a trick frequently resorted to in the play whenever someone is going to say something that will rush the action along a little too fast. Someone else always comes along and queers the pitch for the time being. Having been thus thwarted, Gerald can only hope he will see Elinor at the County Ball which is timed for a week or two ahead; and in view of the tremendous possibilities of the situation, Elinor drains her slender financial resources to provide herself with a gorgeous frock for the auspicious occasion. She is good and pretty and he is rich and handsome, and, speaking as one of the thinking public, I do not ask for more than that.

THEN we come to Lucy, the foolish virgin—in a manner of speaking. She comes to Elinor at the Abbey in a somewhat tearful state and confesses that she is, alas! in trouble. The usual thing. She had set her cap at a young man with twenty thousand a year, and in order to make sure of netting him, bestowed her favours prematurely. And just as the marriage had been arranged in a rather necessary hurry, the poor fellow takes typhoid fever and dies. Lucy, therefore, explains that she must go away at once. She will go to Brighton, but she cannot go alone; and also, and by the way, she has no money. Elinor, therefore, with proper sisterly generosity, decides that she will not have her lovely frock, but will spend the money on Lucy instead, and she will also abandon the idea of going to the ball, and so miss the chance of a lifetime.

THEN two years and a half elapse—never mind about the odd days—and Lucy comes to the Abbey again. It is now clear that she is the Bad One. Her baby has been put out to nurse, and Lucy, once more posing as an eligible girl, deliberately sets her cap again. This time it is to Gerald Forster that she makes her bow, sinfully ignoring the detail that she is treading on the corns of the sister who [illegible] in her direct[illegible].

BY failing to turn up at the Ball, Elinor gave Gerald the impression that she was handing out the frozen mitt. Still, Gerald has not lost hope entirely, and he hangs about the place, looking for a smile from Elinor, and getting one from sister Lucy instead. Gerald's ostensible object in coming to the Abbey is to introduce an old friend, Dibdin, who, being a rich man, rather wants to buy the place and restore it.

DIBDIN is introduced to Elinor and then tells Gerald he has seen the girl before. He is not disposed at first to go into details, but, yielding to pressure from Gerald, he says he saw her with a baby on Brighton Railway Station, just as he was getting into the train with a medical friend who had been in attendance on the very distressing case, and, apparently, had no sort of respect for professional secrecy. The implication Dibdin quite unintentionally conveys is that the baby is Elinor's, and not Lucy's. Gerald Forster pursuing his enquiries, puts one or two discreet questions to Lucy herself, and thus provokes the Lie that started all this trouble. Lucy as good as says that she was in Brighton with her sister because Elinor had the usual little bit of trouble there, and she felt it only the right thing to stand by her and see it through.

IT is not easy to believe in the possibility of such a combination of meanness and mendacity as between sisters; but it is, I am told, usual in plays of the melodramatic type to paint the villain very, very black. I suppose the idea is that an ordinary lapse from grace is so common among the general run of us that it is necessary to create a very sinful character indeed in order that we may have no doubt that the conventions really have been broken. Lucy, finding that Gerald has gone back to Egypt, pursues him to Cairo. Whether she was prepared in the last resort to repeat the tactics of her previous adventure we shall never know. All that we learn is that Gerald marries her chiefly because she is her sister's sister, and never discovers, or even suspects, that she has had a child. I could say more, but it would only cause trouble in the office, and I have had one row with the Editor this week already.

WE then come to the tremendous scene that makes the play a memorable one. Lucy and her husband are paying a flying visit to Grandfather and Elinor. Just as they are preparing to leave, Dibdin, who bought the Abbey, comes and says he restored it in the hope that Elinor would marry him. But Elinor says she cannot do so. She is still, apparently, thinking of Gerald. Dibdin hints to Elinor that why Gerald did not press his suit was because he understood from Lucy herself that the baby born at Brighton was — Elinor's. Naturally, Elinor is a good deal excited at the news. In fact, Dibdin has to hold her hands and try to keep her quiet, as she manifests a clear longing to run out to Lucy before the car has had time to get off the mark and strangle her, or tear her to pieces, or something violent like that. Dibdin does his best to hold the infuriated girl back, but at last she breaks loose. She rushes to the door in time to catch the eye of Lucy, who blows her a kiss. The kiss of Judas. That is Elinor's idea, and she screams aloud after the departing car, "Judas sister! Judas sister!" and then hysteria mercifully intervenes, and the curtain falls.

MARY MERRALL AS LUCY SHALE
LAWRENCE ANDERSON AS GERALD FORSTER

IT is a remarkably strong performance on the part of Miss Thorndike, and the house very properly rises in its enthusiasm at one of the most impressive examples of emotional acting that can have been seen in our time. There is another act to put things right, but it is the final scene of the third act that is going to draw the town, to say nothing of the suburbs. The popularity of the play is deservedly assured.

AS SEEN FROM THE STALLS

"SECRETS" OF NATURE

THE task of the film critic is not always a joy. The film critic may, indeed, be likened unto the camel marching across the desert. Mostly his horizon is bounded by sand. Accident throws one heap of sand higher than another, but they are all just sand. And if you will think for a moment, if you dare, of the amazing army of superfluous sheiks which has been shown on the screen, and if you will realise I have seen them all, you will agree there is truth, and mayhaps tragedy, in my analogy.

Yet, even the desert has its oases. So with the screen. Such an oasis I find in the Secrets of Nature films made by British Instructional Films, with the co-operation of well-known authorities such as Dr. P. Chalmers Mitchell, Dr. E. J. Allen, Mr. F. Martin Duncan, Mr. W. P. Pycraft, Sir Frank Baines, Mr. George Southcote, and Professor Maxwell Lefroy.

THE latest series of Secrets of Nature pictures includes six subjects, averaging 800 feet each in length, which means that on the screen they occupy about ten minutes' time. These pictures, besides photographing nature in a manner never hitherto achieved by any camera, are so artistically constructed that each is in fact a perfect drama.

TAKE The Hunting Spider, a typical example of the series. Here we learn that Mr. Hunting Spider, when he feels the urge of romance, bedecks himself in a brand-new coat of many and brilliant colours by the thrifty device of hauling himself body bulk out of his sombre, everyday garments and revealing to an expectant feminine world that underneath he is a gay cavalier.

Then Mr. H. S. proceeds to the spider's Bond Street to provide himself with a suitable love token for his future bride—not yet known to him!

In spider-land, Bond Street's richest jewel is a juicy fly. This luscious offering Mr. H. S. wraps carefully in silk, and such is his regard for it that he will not have it sent. He takes it with him.

Thus armed for love, he proceeds, I am afraid, somewhat sheik-like, to survey the eligible population of spider-land.

YET he is a shy and sighing lover, timorous of approach. There is a reason, for here the female of the species is bigger as well as more deadly than the male, and it has been known in spider-land for presumptuous lovers to meet untimely ends at the hands of indignant maidens.

So Mr. Hunting Spider "gangs warily." But if he is shy, he is also patient. His patience is inexhaustible. It is impervious to rebuff, even to insult. The lady of his choice, views his gift, and likes it; she views the giver, and likes not it! Indeed, she not only stares through him, but walks over him. But he remembers the man who saved the Republic by waiting, and he waits. And she, like all her sex, capitulates.

We see them marching off together, each keeping a firm hold on the love offering!

NOW comes the serious business of setting up a home. The lady weaves a silken cocoon, fills it with eggs, grips it in her fangs and carries it about wherever she goes, till she finds a secluded patch of grass. There, she binds the heads of several grass stems together, and weaves a platform on which she can hold the cocoon to the sun. Then, when the eggs begin to hatch, the mother weaves a silken chamber, like a miniature mosquito-net, which is a nursery, and which she protects from all attack.

Inside this silken nursery we can see the young spiders at play. We can see them changing their skins in the cocoon. We can see the mother decide her children are of age to fend for themselves. Rapidly she pierces holes in the silken net, and vanishes from the stage! Her part is done.

A LITTLE later her children emerge and crawl to the top of their home and survey the world. They decide to separate. One by one they throw out silken life lines which, floating on the wind, catch on some projection and form a taut line on which their weavers can travel.

So they go out one by one until their first home is deserted.

Another cycle in the life of the Hunting Spider is complete.

AND so the drama of life is unfolded before our eyes in these very wonderful pictures, which are more than just nature studies. They are, artistically, of extraordinary beauty, and of compelling dramatic power, sometimes with a touch of comedy, sometimes with real pathos.

Mr. B. L. Farjeon's novel of this name is now being filmed by the Astra-National people on a very lavish scale, as this interior shows. The cast is even more lavish than the setting. For, in addition to Gertrude McCoy and Owen Nares (seen in the foreground), it includes Russell Thorndike, Ben Webster, Ellaline Terris, who makes her film début, Moyna McGill, Henrietta Watson, and Mary Brough

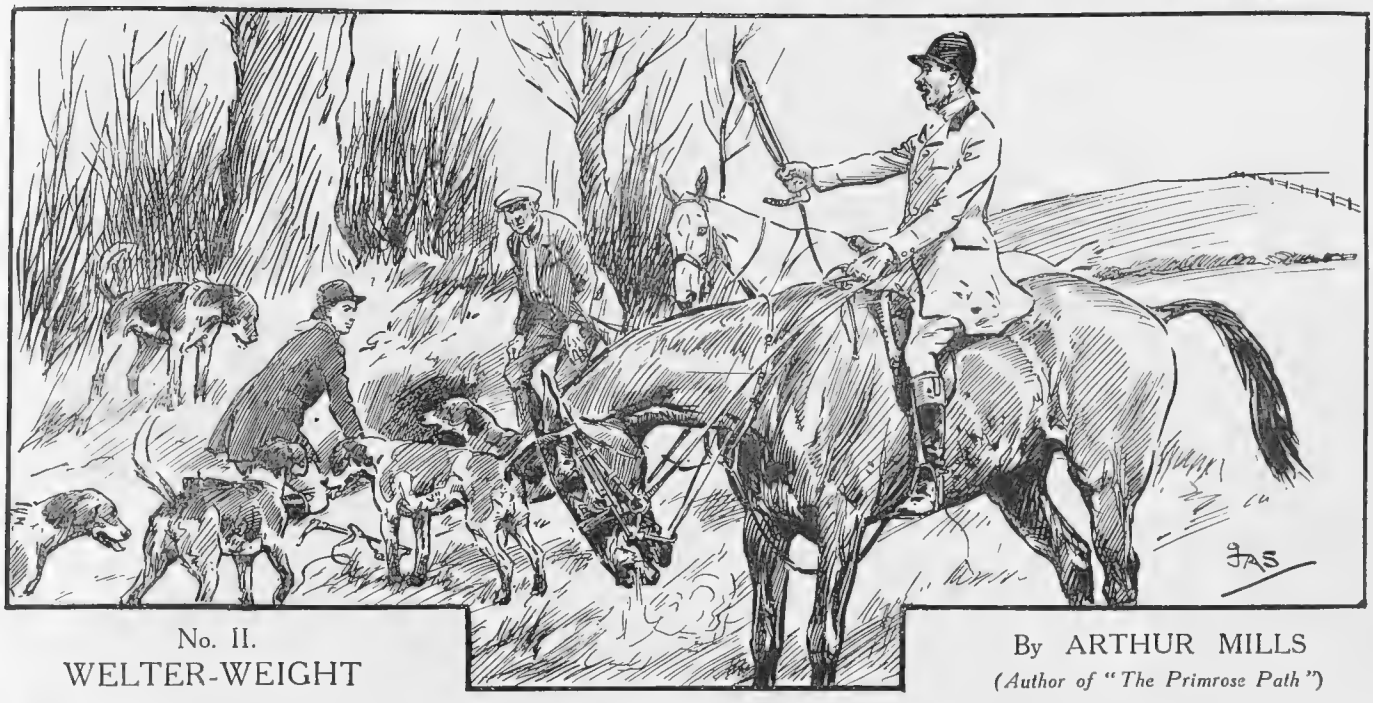
STUDIES IN PINK



No. II.
WELTER-WEIGHT

By ARTHUR MILLS
(Author of "The Primrose Path")

SINCE Surtees' time, many a man, finding himself commercially successful in middle years, has turned his attention to foxhunting—more power to him.

Only they are not all like the immortal Jorrocks.

Sir Samuel Sproggett, M.F.H., was not; but this is the story of his transformation.

I can see him now—a great big man on a great big horse, wearing a brand-new pink coat that fitted his body like its skin fits a pear and in much the same way, mahogany tops pulled over his stocky calves, and a velvet hunting cap pulled over his eyes.

I can hear his: "————Hold hard! sir. Where the————do you————think you are going?"

A plain-spoken man was Sir Samuel, ladies or no present. Indeed, for the ladies he cared little, as was shown by his reference to the wives of two of the largest covert-owners in the country as "those cackling women."

In the hunting field he wielded the power of a Tu-Tu in China, a Pasha in the Orient, a Commissary.

It became positively unsafe to speak to him.

"A holloa forard is there!" he would snort in answer to a piece of information, volunteered by a tenant farmer in the middle of whose wheat he was standing. "Damn and blast it, man! Are you hunting these hounds or am I?"

You see, he had a lot to learn. Indeed, how he had ever become a M.F.H. only his bankers knew. He had taken to hunting late in life, after, in fact, the greatly increased sales of his cloth enabled him to. Not that there was anything of the profiteer about Sir Samuel; many a soldier has been grateful for the warmth of Sproggett welter-weight cloth. Only that as the price of cloth went up and land went down, his position in the country became more secure. Beginning by hunting from Birmingham he ended by hunting from Spelling, the Wrekin's fine old place which he bought. And when Lord Wrekin had to give up the hounds, Sir Samuel was the only person in the market to take them over.

Many people shuddered. But there it was. Who else had the money?

All one season Sir Samuel thundered through Medshire. They say foxes get to know the sound of the huntsman's voice; assuredly there was not a cub in the county that did not know Sir Samuel's horn. Consequently sport was not good, consequently Sir Samuel's temper was not good, either. The field got the benefit of this, and old subscribers, who remembered Lord Wrekin's quiet but effective manner, gave up coming out. However, the hunt carried on, and the severity of Sir Samuel's rule increased.

And then one day the rumour spread that Royalty might shortly honour the hunt by a visit. Sir Samuel's manner became increasingly consequential. The visit would add the finishing touch to his triumph. He bullied the field more than ever, but his crowning act was when he gave them the slip from Thatchover.

Hounds were drawing a big wood, from which it often took a long time to get a fox away. Sir Samuel had bullied the whole of the field into remaining at one end of the wood, and would allow no one to go forward into the rides as hounds worked through, as they had always done in Lord Wrekin's day. A fox, with hounds close behind, went away very quickly. Sir Samuel gave no warning to the unfortunate field; in fact, he slipped them neatly and completely, and settled down with his whipper-in to enjoy a solitary and selfish hunt. Hounds had covered a couple of miles at a good pace when a stranger came on the scene. The stranger was in a tweed jacket, breeches and gaiters; he had evidently seen hounds from a neighbouring house, and jumped on the back of the first horse he could find.

Sir Samuel could not very well tell the stranger to go home, much as he would have liked to; also, the pace was too good for talk. The pace improved, and Sir Samuel began to lose ground, despite the network of gates he had had let in all over the country. The stranger, who jumped everything that came his way, kept up with hounds well.

"Blast the fellow! He'll jump on a hound in a minute," thought Sir Samuel, looking savagely at the young man's back, but he had no breath left for cursing.

Distance between hounds and Master increased. The whipper-in took a toss and fell out. Came an awful moment when hounds were lost to view over the brow of a hill. Breasting the brow of the hill, Sir Samuel saw a sight that nearly made him break a blood vessel.

(All rights strictly reserved)

Hounds had checked in the valley below, and the stranger was calmly casting them.

"A damned young whipper-snapper in a rat-catcher suit casting my hounds!" Sir Samuel pounded down the hill, but as he reached the bottom hounds hit the line again, and away they went, the stranger with them.

The stranger was now quite obviously hunting the pack, calling now to this hound and that, riding a little wide on the flank, looking well forward.

"Wait till I get you, my boy!" thought Sir Samuel, "I'll teach you to hunt my hounds." He had not to wait long. A mile further on hounds marked their fox to ground in a big earth.

A farm hand who happened to be by gave some account of the dialogue that followed.

"The Master, 'e did use some language; he called that poor young fellow all the names under the sun; and 'im as 'ad only been doing his best, too, what any other man would ha' done in 'is place.

"The young feller, 'e was on 'is knees trying to see 'ow deep the earth was. He never looked up, nor said a word. But when Sir Samuel 'ad finished he got to his feet, said: 'Sorry, Master, it's been a capital hunt, anyway, thanks very much. Good night,' took off his hat and cantered off.

"Sir Samuel 'e just stood there gaping. Never saw a man look so surprised in me life. Then 'e turned to me an' said, 'Do you know 'oo that was?' just like that, and without another word rode away." A. M.

THE LION HUNTER

By J. A. LLOYD

THE small, meek-looking man drifted into the bar-parlour of the "Flea and Goggles" and sat down. His face was drawn and haggard, and his reserve was almost oppressive. Breaking out of this reserve only so far as to order a glass of beer, he once more lapsed into a moody silence.

The company took his measure furtively. His clothes, though old and rusty-looking, were not without a certain distinction in a washed-out, third-rate fashion. Obviously, he had seen better days.

A hammer-shaft peeped out of his coat-pocket.

After a time, one of the rustics ventured to address him with—"Out of work, mister?"

The phlegmatic stranger replied with a monosyllabic "Yes."

The countryman was a persevering sort of chap, so he tried again.

"Carpenter, mister?"

This was received with a stolid but quite emphatic "No."

The yokel was not to be put off, however. Your true villager will have your story out of you or die in the attempt. So he began once more.

"Seein' as you've an 'ammer in yer pocket, that's why I——"

"Oh! the hammer," smiled the stranger, coming out of his trance with a jerk. "Yes, this hammer used to belong to my uncle."

He resurrected it, and exhibited it to the company. Nothing very extraordinary about it. It was a common-looking hammer enough.

"I've sold everything," he resumed, "bar this here hammer. I've starved in a ditch, but I've stuck to the hammer. Nothing would induce me to part with it. Yes, gentlemen," he cried in a burst of confidence, "this is the hammer with which my uncle, the famous sportsman, used to catch lions in Africa."

Here the company took a good look at him, and then a good look at each other, to assure themselves that they were not dreaming. The barman leaned on his elbows over the counter with his mouth open and his ears flapping.

The gentle stranger, as if unconscious of the electrical effect he had produced, pursued the even tenor of his tale.

"My uncle was a very clever man. His business was to catch lions and sell them. He could not be bothered with traps and cages. Too much trouble. Traps are such a bally nuisance. All he had was a door and this little hammer.

"He had the picture of a man drawn on the door, and handles behind to carry it by.

"He would take the door with him into the jungle, and as soon as he sighted a lion, he would prop up the door and stand behind it. The lion would spot the man drawn on the door, and go for him with his head down. Springing on the door, his claws would come right through it.

"Then my uncle would just take the hammer out of his pocket and clinch the lion's claws down like the clinching of nails, and he'd have him on toast.

"Then he'd turn his back to the door and carry off the lion to the nearest market."

The glass which the bar-tender was polishing fell from his hands and smashed to atoms on the floor. The assembly gazed at one another in silence.

The yokel who had opened the ball was the first to find his voice.

"But look 'ere, mister," he cried, in an argumentative tone, "you don't mean to say as——"

But the quiet man was once more sunk in his wonted gloom. He became more and more gloomy. He wiped his eyes from time to time. His distress became acute. He strove to speak but his emotions choked him. He made a really gallant attempt to subdue his feelings. Finally, he sobbed out, "I am afraid I shall be forced to sell it, though it would feel like tearing my heart out to do it. But I can't go on much longer—beg pardon, sir, did you say a pound? Well, only to oblige you . . ."

He hesitated, reached for the money uncertainly and groped for the door, his tears blinding him.

"But they have had the shock"

MES AMIS—

ONE has now proved to the most conclusively that Jacques Deval has wrong. You shall, perhaps, remember that Jacques Deval is the author who has written the play, Beauté, which has the idea that a jeune homme has the little chance to secure the affections of the demoiselle du jour, unless it is that he shall have the handsomeness. There have been those among us, in a discussion at the Rotonde, who have disagreed with the contention toute de suite, and there have been the others who have insisted that M. Deval has to a degree had right. But there has, to the surprise of the two principal parties, been the third section which has introduced the theory that, so far from to be the drawback, the ugliness has the power to attraction.

NOT only has this caused, as one has said, the surprise, but also the contradiction. Almost has there been the torridity of the controversy. The disputants have nearly come to the hands. Enfin has been uttered the challenge, "You must make the proof of your disconcerting theory." It has been expected that the advocates should have been thus dismayed, but it has not been the case. They have taken the war on to the terrain of the opponents.

"WE will select Marcel," have they said, maliciously, "to execute the experiment. All will agree that Marcel, en nature, has more than the legitimate share of the good looks and is a favourite of the sexe faible (no blushes from Marcel, who is not embarrassed by a recognition of the facts). Well, we shall loan to Marcel the ugliness, and he shall establish that there will be more demoiselles in his pursuit than at the present." How to make Marcel ugly is thereupon the problem, but the theorists have been perfectly equipped for the experiment. "He shall assume the big spectacles à l'Américaine; that shall make him appear a tortoise of the tomes like the hero of Deval."

En effet the beau Marcel, behind the horrid rims of horn, has appeared as exactly the such tortoise. The upholders of the handsomeness theory have been joyfully confident that he should scare away any demoiselle at whom he should have the effrontery to make the grimaces. But they have had the shock. Even the moderates have had the shock. Marcel, comme beau, has never so been pursued in the dancings and on the boulevards as Marcel the uglified.

HAS been agreed at once that there must be the urgent and the most vigorous action about this. We are engaged to prepare a tract which shall be distributed in the homes of America. If it is wished not to plunge the American young (and unyoung) men into the terrible danger to be the objet de chasse of hundreds of the Parisiennes, there must be the prohibition against to bring the spectacles with them to Paris. If they show them on the boulevards there is little hope of escape from to be overwhelmed.

WE have agreed to do this solely in the interest of the young Americans. En plus—to deflect the perils—we have decided, as good and self-immolating Allies, to wear the moon-faced spectacles ourselves. Everyone of us. It is so nice to be run after again. Surtout when one has no dollars, either to-day or to-morrow.

"Tiens, Eugène, te voilà donc arrêté aussi"

C'EST rigolo, is it not, how people are able to come back into the picture after to have been excluded for the long time? The wheel of la Dame Fortune has the most consistent habit to bring about the reversals. There has been a recent incident with a prodigal brother which has carried the great joy to the "Quarter" and among the Boîtes of Montmartre.

ONE of those industriels who come to the capital from the time to time from the provinces—after to have made the excuse to their wives that they have to attend a conseil d'administration —has complained to the police that a demoiselle with whom he has sampled the champagne, has disappeared with his wallet. With the preliminaries of the adventure which has provoked the rencontre, have appeared to him too humorous for the silence.

"Amusons-nous avec celles qui n'ont pas le sou" description, it has been a rapid matter for the police to seize the demoiselle and bring her chez le commissaire. So efficient, in effect, have been the police that before the industriel has had scarcely time to pronounce the formal identification, they have also brought in a jovial person, whom they have known to make for some time the gay rounds of the boîtes with this demoiselle, and whom they have thought could be liable to a share of the blame in the affair of the wallet.

CONCEIVE the surprise of everyone when the jovial person has addressed the industriel with the greeting, "Tiens, Eugène, te voilà donc arrêté aussi." The industriel has made the desperate signals to the jovial one to induce him to carry no further the indiscretion, but the roysterer has obviously found the delight to unfold to the commissaire the story. Eugène is the highly respectable brother who has refused to have any communication with him since that he has abandoned the village for the riotous life in the capital. The fact that the demoiselle for whom he has quit the usine has been the means to bring him into the presence of the "bon" frère, and the

AND Paris thanks him that it has not been deprived of the histoire. It is not that it is a pity that the writers of the revues cannot invent the sketches which are as substantial in the merriment as the incidents of fact? If they should only take the trouble they could procure the inspiration from the petites annonces among the advertisements of the men who search for the wives, and the ladies who seek for the husbands.

HAS been published one in which a tradesman has offered the marriage to a jeune fille who shall possess a dot of fifty thousands of francs, and have a knowledge of the business of ironmongery. There has been no stipulation that she shall be blonde or brune, have a favoured colour of eyes, perfect form or features or any kind of charm. Not any physical attribut is mentioned as an essential qualification. Just an acquaintance with the trade of ironmongery. The rattle of the pans in the shop is the sufficient language of romance to be exchanged with his wife by this infatuated ironmonger.

AND he is far from to be alone in his theories. There are many of the kind who have the similar enterprise to proclaim their peculiar policy in the petites annonces. One has advertised for a young wife of eighteen to twenty-two years who shall have enough dot to bring into utilisation a hydraulic force of eighty to ninety horse-power, which he owns, but which he is unable to develop faute de capital. What more could a wife demand to make her happy than a hydraulic force of eighty to ninety horse-power? One can easily imagine that the wooer with the water-power could be immensely surprised at the discovery that there should not be the thousands of jeunes filles who could not regard it as the perfect bliss.

"C'est un mélange"

UNLESS it is that these profiteers of the scarcity of husbands should avow frankly that all they desire to marry is the dot, and, as for romance, "Amusons-nous avec celles qui n'ont pas le sou." Like that, of course, they do contribute to counterbalance the lack of the numbers. As the lady says, when you indiscreetly ask for the name of the perfume which has made the impression upon you, the society of after-war, "C'est un mélange." And quel mélange. RENÉ

MAINLY IN THE INTERROGATIVE!

Lord Kenyon (right) discusses the future of the race and other "bookee-ish" subjects at Chelmsford

Motoritis. By Dell Leigh

MOTORITIS is a winter ailment caught by a few hundred thousand people of both sexes and all ages annually in November.

You can get it in a mild form at any time of year. But in November it is apt to be serious and expensive.

It does not descend upon you suddenly, like hay fever or a relaxed throat; there are premonitory symptoms. These appear generally by the startled exclamation, "You don't mean that, do you?" when you hear someone say he has just come back from the Motor Show. And you add, hastily, "I thought it was at the beginning of next month?" And when he reassures you by the remark that he was referring to the Motor Cycle Show, you sink back in your chair with a thank-heaven-for-that expression on your face; which proves you are about to get it—and badly.

The few hundred thousand patients become worked up to hectic discussions upon cars active and cars passive (i.e., "Sold it, my dear boy, for £50 more than I gave for it"), and proceed to lie about their own particular car's performances and attributes with a naïveté that would not pass unchallenged in July. The Motor Show environment settles like a pall over everyone.

Motoritis does not spread itself about the body in a stereotyped, easily diagnosed form. Let us examine some phases of the disease.

There is, first of all, the Annual Mystery. So-and-so are going to show a car this year which will "revolutionise the motor trade." Nothing like it has ever been seen before. The intimation is that quite a dozen competitors will file their petitions immediately. Or Balderdash, the Body-Builders, have got a Limousine on Stand X.F. (West Wing), specially built for one of the Communist Princes, the lustre and cunningness of which has never been equalled. It has a constant hot-water supply, folding nickel-plated bed, wireless, and a couple of noiseless typewriters, all disappearing under seats, and things—marvellous! "You must see that, ol' man."

One finds that the trade is "revolutionised" every year. And yet it goes steadily on. Very curious.

You are drawn into the vortex. You pretend the whole thing bores you stiff. You make a faint stand against the tide of public opinion and universal conversation that is dragging you Olympia-wards. And then, with a shrug of resignation, and your thoughts hovering over the little coupé model you saw last night on page 780 of The Motorist, you drift towards the Place of The Wangle. Not, of course, on one of the ordinary days. Good gracious, no! Not a hope on an ordinary day. On a 5*s.* day, yes. Unfortunately, seventy-eight thousand others have had the same feelings as you upon this point. I cannot understand why The Motor Traders' Mutual Recrimination Association—or whatever the controlling body of the sport is—do not have a Pound Day? It would be a gift for them, as the saying is.

You need not have any intention of buying a car or any part of a car. Nobody minds if you spend five hours at Olympia and don't even buy a chamois leather. Personally, I go several times annually to see and enjoy the spectacle of other people deceiving themselves and yet fondly imagining the truth is still in them.

When you have proceeded about four yards beyond the swing doors the bumping match begins. The whole world and the other man's wife seem intent upon the gentle but exceedingly fatiguing art of shoving against your person. You don't walk up the aisle between the stands; you are propelled onward by oscillation.

The first familiar friend of the Show is the Brain Storm. The man, I mean, in the mackintosh, pince-nez and velour hat, who is having a fearfully polite but heated argument with the Immaculate Seller, in a jargon crammed with engineering technique. A crowd, uncomfortably large for the Seller, listens agape to the diatribe of the Brain Storm, who discourses upon tensile strengths, periodicity and harmonic gears. Unknown to the majority of the crowd the Brain Storm is cross-questioning the Seller about the weak spots in the chassis—but there may be one comprehending listener, and the Seller wishes the velour hat and pince-nez in Hades.

The ladies, as at all times and in all places, interest you enormously. They are of two species. There are the few-and-far-between. These wear Burberrys, shapeless felt hats and brogues. They peer into engines, and ask searching questions about the magneto, which they call "the mag." On being piloted gently away by the salesman towards the glistening body, they nod curtly, and say, "Yes, that's all right; now tell me about these bearings, are they . . .?"

The prevalent feminine type makes straight for the back seat, into which she sinks gracefully, extends a silk-clad ankle provocatively, pats the leatherwork all over, and says, archly, to her escort, "Isn't she lovely, George?" Then the salesman has his cue, which is not to speak of torque rods or cam-shafts, but of bodywork, and of the latest type of luggage grid for the leather trunk. His task is easy, if boring; though sales are made that way, I'm told.

Then there is The Fastidious and Thoughtful Firm. They cannot have their customers' (or possibles') clothes soiled while bending over the naked frames of cars. So they proceed, at great expense, to produce and expose a chassis which appears to be made entirely of beaten silver. Its gears mesh under a glass case. Its brake-drums, con rods, and steering column are as the sword blade of a Guards officer. In any part of this resplendent piece of mechanism you could see to shave far better than you can see in the maisonette bathroom at home. It is sacrilege to imagine that this chassis could ever have a soap box strapped to its body, and be submitted to the November mire of streets. I wonder what happens to it after the Show? Though there are, of course, always Leaders of Red Armies over here, buying things.

Somewhat unhinged by all this magnificence, and having now been oscillated into a state of mind bordering on a massacre of the innocents, you seek sanctuary in the (supposed) peace of the Gallery of Accessories. It is here, however, that the serpent of temptation raises a vicious head. At every Stand there is exhibited just the gadget your little car is thirsting for; without which your motoring life will cease to be any pleasure at all. Up to a point you stave off the pain of resisted purchase by saying: "Thanks, yes, I should like to look carefully into this—may I?" And you manage to get away by cramming the stall's literature into your pockets.

When you are on the verge of physical collapse; when your pockets are nigh to bursting with their unwonted possessions; when you are suffering acutely from the mental indigestion engendered by all Shows; and, more serious still, when you have actually bought far more than your absent wife will say you can afford, you stagger towards the dim and distant exit, murmuring "never again, by gad!" in an imbecile monotone.

But next year all these heart searchings and vituperations will be forgotten. You will sicken for the disease again, and get it. For will not Suchandsuch be exhibiting something that is going absolutely to kill all other cars of that category . . . .?

A NEAR THING

A good effort, which only just failed, to convert one of the four tries gained by Scotland and Ireland into a goal

THE RUGBY CENTENARY

By "PENDARVES"

We were lucky men, those of us who sat round the touch lines in the Rugby School Close, on Thursday last, to see the composite International Match played there, on a ground hallowed by tradition and soaked in splendid memories.

I suppose it was the most thoroughly critical collection of appreciative spectators that has ever watched the Rugby game in such numbers. Every man there (there were scarcely any women) was connected vitally with the game, now or in the past. Every man playing was the best of his kind; all except one, F. Baker, of Newport, had played for his country—and Baker will this year, probably. Thirty brilliant individualists, out to give of their very best for a very great occasion. And 2,000 Rugby men, fully alive to the meaning of the moment, standing there to watch them do it.

A hundred years ago the Rugby game was born, on this very ground; and a Rugby schoolboy, William Webb Ellis, immortalised his name for future generations by taking the ball in his arms "with a fine disregard for the rules" of that time, and running with it. He committed an offence crudely, unthinkingly, no doubt. And to-day we saw the development of his crime brought to a high science by masters of the craft, from all the four countries, going "full out," every one of them, feeling keenly the honour of the hour they shared with those who watched them on the old school ground.

What appealed to me most about the whole thing was its simplicity. There was no fuss, no heroics, no excitement before the wonderful game. We wandered in through the familiar, age-old Quads to Big Side, just as on an ordinary House-match day. The whole atmosphere was typically, unemotionally British. We sat and smoked, and pondered on Tom Brown, and all his breed; while the clock over his study struck off the quarters, now as then, as always. A Cambridge blazer or two flitted about under the Elms. The Great Men were at hand, ready—as always.

There was welcoming laughter and hand-clapping when dear old "Jiggle," whose firm in the town has made footballs for the School for generations, hobbled alone to the centre of the ground with a new ball under his arm, and solemnly placed it in position, saluted the assembled company, and retired with tears, they say, trickling down his cheeks. With no heraldry of band or boisterous acclamations, the teams trotted on, to play a game they will remember all their lives. And we, too, who watched it. The pick of Scotland and Ireland first, in special green and blue jerseys. Then England and Wales in white, with the double emblem of the Rose and Leek in red on their breasts. And what a game! I verily believe Providence sat on the goal posts directing operations. The whole glamour of the Rugby game as it is played to-day surrounded that match. Everything was done that one reads of as having been done in big matches on big occasions. One saw all the star performers doing the things they are famed for doing. Picture after tense picture flashed by. There was the Kershaw-Davies danger always prevalent. They worked together with their usual sixth sense. There was a wonderful dropped goal by Davies—one of his best. Another, equally clever and quick,

A SMART BREAK-AWAY

By one of the Scotland-Ireland team, after a line out. The marking was so good that this sort of thing did not often happen by the Welshman, Johnson. The indomitable Wakefield goes over with one of his smashing-through tries. Baker converts it from an almost impossible angle, the perfection of place kicking. Gracie, with a snipe swerve, passes inside to G. V. Stephenson, who scores a dramatic try. Voyce appears from nowhere, as usual, and scores, and Luddington converts. The tackling of the Stephenson brothers on either wing for Scotland-Ireland is wonderful and persistent; and the three Irish forwards fight as six men. There are continual casualties, mostly to the head, owing to ferocious tackling, but no man leaves the ground while he can stand; no man did. It was fierce, fine football.

Ten minutes to go and England-Wales 5 points ahead. Many of us began to wish fervently for a drawn game. It would be so apt a finish. The pace, fast enough in all conscience, is doubled. Follow three desperate Irish-Scotch forward rushes, saved in the last few yards by utterly fearless men "going down" to it head on. Retaliation by "Wakers," who hands off four opponents, and is hurled to earth by two more. The light begins to go, but the terribly skilful fight continues without pause—to the splendid end.

If the ghosts of Old Rugbeians were standing about in the shadows of the distant elms, as one liked to feel they were, they must have been well pleased. All the old traditions had been faithfully observed; hardness, cleanliness, pluck. It mattered little who won. The game had been played, very gallantly. And that is all there is to it—was to it—or will be to it. It was meet that it was played there before the few of the past, the present and the future, rather than in a clamorous, unthinking elsewhere, so vehemently desired by the thousands to whom it was denied.

It was the greatest day in the history of the game.

And the greatest day in the history of the School that bred it.

RACING NOTIONS

By "CARBINE"

Turf Emotions

RACING necessarily has its sordid side, but the sport would not exercise the wonderful fascination it undoubtedly has for the nation if it were merely a matter of pelf. For all the interchange of monies in the ring, racing people are really an emotional crowd, and a first-class performance will usually rouse them to enthusiasm whether they have backed the winner or not. But it is a long time since I have seen the multitude stirred to such excitement as the race for the Cambridgeshire produced. It takes something altogether exceptional to cause an assembly at Newmarket to burst forth into wild cheering. People fairly let themselves go when it was seen that Verdict had vanquished the champion of France. It seemed almost as though they accepted the result as revenge for the Stewards' Cup, the Cesarewitch, and the Papyrus fiasco.

A Memorable Race

CERTAINLY it was not financial gains which caused the crowd to applaud the success of Verdict so vociferously. The result favoured the bookmakers rather than the backers, but our pride in the English thoroughbred was at stake, and I think we should all have felt a little humiliated if a French horse had captured another of our great handicaps. At the same time I am sure that the people in their sporting impartiality would not have denied Epinard a great ovation if he had won. Even though he was beaten, everybody recognised that he had put up a magnificent achievement. In fact, in our time we may never see a better performance in the Cambridgeshire or any similar race.

A Popular Verdict

ANOTHER reason why Verdict's success was so popular is the fact that she is owned by one of the best sportsmen in the land. For something like sixty years the Earl of Coventry has raced on the best lines, and it is always delightful to meet the veteran on the racecourse. Verdict was a thoroughly exposed animal. By sundry game performances she had won the affections of those who follow racing regularly. Thus everything combined to make her triumph a matter for satisfaction. We have been told, of course, that Epinard was unlucky not to win—that he would have done better if his jockey had not forced the pace or had not crossed over to the rails. The truth is that the French colt was ridden exactly in accordance with carefully thought out plans, and I know that his owner and trainer do not seek to make any excuses for him. They are still proud in the knowledge that he is the best colt in the world over a mile or a little more.

Pharos This Week

THOSE who backed Pharos for the Cambridgeshire had a fairly good run for their money, and they have an excellent chance of getting it back in the Liverpool Cup this week. It was my impression that Lord Derby's colt was in need last week of a few more gallops. It was only about a month before the race that Mr. Lambton was able to begin to train him again, and it now appears that the time was too short to produce perfect condition. I am convinced that we shall see a better Pharos at Aintree this week. Of course, he again has plenty of weight to carry, but I have great faith in his "class." His old rival, Twelve Pointer, will be among those opposing him. I make Pharos my selection. Goodness knows what sort of price we shall have to take about him.

At Aintree

THIS meeting at Liverpool is always one of the most delightful of the autumn, with its mixture of National Hunt sport and flat-racing. The Grand Sefton Steeplechase will be one of the problems on Thursday, and here I predict the success of Double Up, who has already shown his ability to get over the stiff Aintree fences, and has been specially trained for the race. In the Lancashire Handicap Highbrow may repeat the success he gained in this event last year. In the Knowsley Nursery Purple Shade may give the weight to all his rivals. I fancy Zanoni for the Croxteth Plate, and Baydon for the Grosvenor Cup.

HUNTING NOTES

By ARTHUR W. COATEN

Belvoir's Future

WHO will be the new Master of the Belvoir? That question is now exciting considerable interest in the Shires. The pack is still one of the finest in the kingdom, and its Mastership, in spite of its manifold responsibilities, is a distinction which any sportsman might covet. For considerably more than a century, successive Dukes of Rutland maintained the country in princely fashion, and the skill, judgment and patience of their huntsmen produced a pack of hounds which became the envy of all other kennels. The time inevitably came when the Manners were no longer able to furnish sport for all and sundry in the old free-handed style, and so the Belvoir joined the ranks of subscription hunts. Under its more recent Masters, the pack has maintained its high reputation. Major "Tommy" Bouch, who has just handed in his resignation, has carried out the difficult dual rôle of Master and huntsman, and he has certainly given his followers a good time both on the Leicestershire and the Lincolnshire sides. It was with the Belvoir that the Prince of Wales had his first morning's cubhunting upon his return from Canada.

A Loss to Horse-Breeding

UNFORTUNATELY, there were several fatal mishaps in the hunting-field during the cubhunting campaign. Among the victims was Mr. Stanley Hough, who was killed as the result of a fall when out with the hounds in Essex last week. I knew Mr. Hough very well in connection with his activities in breeding the Arab horse. He was an enthusiastic admirer of the Eastern blood, and a firm believer in its value for practical purposes. His magnificent Arab stallions were always a delight to look upon when he sent them to the spring shows at Islington. Nor did he hesitate to subject his stock to some of the interesting endurance tests which have been held in recent years. His death makes a serious gap among those who are concerned in the advancement of the Arab breed.

"Foot-and-Mouth"

IN many directions the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease is causing considerable anxiety to hunting people. Already a number of districts have been temporarily closed to hounds, and the outbreak at the present moment, to say the least, is by no means encouraging. I suppose the rigid regulations of the Ministry of Agriculture are the best methods of combating the trouble, but it is curious that in the old days this disease among the cattle was checked with considerably less bother and red tape. No doubt we shall be told that science has advanced in its treatment of foot-and-mouth ravages, yet the destructive malady seems to be on the increase, and agriculturists would very much like to know the reason why. It was feared last week that some of the arrangements for opening meets would have to be altered in view of the latest outbreak, but it so happened that only a few of the places selected for the first appointments of the regular season were within the proscribed areas.

Puckeridge Prospects

FROM the Puckeridge country I have received a glowing account of the outlook for sport. A most successful period of cubhunting has been enjoyed, and the stock of foxes is said to be highly satisfactory. This is the more noteworthy in that an appreciable section of the Puckeridge area is given over to shooting. Naturally, game is more thought of than foxes in those parts. It has been proved over and over again that foxes and pheasants can live together, and there is no real reason why the pack in question should suffer seriously by the prevalence of shooting interests. Mr. Edward Barclay has now started his twenty-seventh season in the Mastership, which is sufficient to indicate that he has found considerable pleasure in his work. He is ably assisted by his son, Major M. E. Barclay, and they have a first-rate huntsman in Bob Gardiner. All that is needed for a good season's sport will be plenty of wet and open weather. So far there has been no reason to complain of the lack of moisture, and there ought to be some good scenting days during the present month.

LUCKY AND UNLUCKY HANDS

PROBLEM No. II., while it produced fewer entries than usual, brought some very interesting replies. The luckiest hand sent in was, in my opinion, the following:

Score: Game all. Y and Z 18 in rubber game. A and B—0.

Z dealt and called "one Club." A and Y passed, and B called "one Heart," Z passed, and A called "four Hearts." Y holding: H—x. D—A, J, x, x. C—K, Q, x, x. S—K, 9, x, x., called "four Spades." B called "five Hearts" and Z "five Spades." A doubled and all passed.

Z put down: H—None. D—K, 10, x. C—A, J, 10, x, x, x. S—8, x, x, x.

A Heart was opened and ruffed by Z. A small Spade was led from dummy and Y put up 9, which drew the Queen. B then led a Club, which was won in dummy. Another Spade was led, A put up the 10. Y played small, and B took the trick with Ace. B had not another Club to lead, and Y got in on next lead, drew the Jack of Spades with the King and made all the rest of the tricks—five Spades doubled.

This was certainly a lucky hand both in bidding and play. Y's call of "four Spades" was a leap in the dark and might have been severely punished. I do not give the hand as an illustration of good bidding, but as an example of what may happen even with bad bidding. Y was lucky, too, in the lie of the cards in play.

As an unlucky hand the following is adjudged the best (or worst) sent in:

Score: Love all. Z dealt and called "one no-trump." A "No." Y "No." B "two Clubs." Z "No." A "No." Y "two no-trumps." All passed.

The hands were—

	Y S—None. H—K, J, 8, 7. D—Q, J, 10, 5, 3, 2. C—K, 9, 6.
S—A, Q, 9, 8, 6, 3. H—9, 4, 2. D—6. C—Q, J, 4.	A	B S—J, 10, 7. H—6, 5. D—9, 4. C—A, 10, 8, 7, 3, 2.
	Z S—K, 5, 4, 2. H—A, Q, 10, 3. D—A, K, 8, 7. C—5.

A led Queen of Clubs and A, B made 6 tricks in the suit straight away. B then led Jack of Spades, and A, B made 6 tricks in Spades.

Y, Z were 7 tricks under their contract—350 and 50 for a small slam. Total loss, 400 points!

Z's initial no-trumper was quite sound. I am a little doubtful of Y's raise to two no-trumps with Clubs declared sitting over him. I should have preferred "two Diamonds." But no one can say that the calling was either rash or reckless, and it was certainly bad luck for Z to lose a little slam on his hand.

. . . . . .

The three BYSTANDER sets for the best answers to Problem II have been awarded to L. J. Walker, The Copse, Rose Walk, Purley; C. E. S. T. Lutley, 6, Farley Terrace, Truro; and A. T. de Sausmarez, Springfield, Guernsey.

Solution to Practical Play Problem, No. III

(a) Z should pass.

His hand is not strong enough to call "Spades," and re-open the bidding. There may be a strong Heart or no-trump call in opponents' hands. The state of the score makes a bid on his part still more dangerous than if his adversaries were at love. His pass can do no harm, and the position is one that calls for safety.

(b) Z should say "one Heart."

Most of the competitors vote for "one Spade," and undoubtedly there is something to be said for the bid. But the point is, that if Z calls Spades first and is over-called by Diamonds, Clubs or no-trumps he cannot show his Hearts on second round. Whereas if he bids his Hearts first he can call "two Spades" later. On the principle of showing first the suit in which you hold "quick tricks," the Heart call is the right one.

(c) Y should pass.

In my opinion it would be quite wrong for Y to call "three Diamonds." He holds three Hearts, a singleton in Spades, and only two Clubs. He has, therefore, valuable support in Hearts, and his Diamonds, for all their length, are not likely to do better than the Heart call. The bidding of the Diamond would be tantamount to denying support in the Heart suit. If this hand had been decided by plebiscite "three Diamonds" would have it. But my verdict is against the majority.

The three prizes have been awarded as follows:

OWEN SERGEANT, The Glen, Stanmore, Middlesex.

CLIFFORD P. BENNETT, 48, King Henry's Road, London, N.W. 3.

Miss ISABEL CHRISTIE, Pension Alphina, Davos Platz, Switzerland.

PRACTICAL PLAY PROBLEM No. V

Score: Game all. Z deals and calls "two no-trumps." A "three Spades." Y "No." Z doubles. All pass.

A holds:

S—A, Q, J, 10, 9, 6, 5.
H—8, 6.
D—K, Q, 4.
C—5.

B (dummy) holds no card higher than a 10. Y leads 5 of Diamonds, B plays 6 of Diamonds, Z Ace, and A 4 of Diamonds.

Z leads King of Clubs which wins. A makes five Spades. Place the cards as accurately as you can in B's hand. State Z's lead at trick 3 and forecast the manner in which A plays the hand.

Prizes are offered of three BYSTANDER Bridge Sets, value one guinea each. These sets consist of two packs of cards with scoring boards in a handsome leather case. The following conditions must be observed: (1) Replies must be received not later than first post on Tuesday, November 13. (2) Not more than one solution may be sent by any one competitor. Every competitor must give full name and address, but pseudonyms may be used. (3) All solutions should be addressed to BRIDGE No. 5, THE BYSTANDER, TALLIS STREET, WHITEFRIARS, LONDON, E.C. 4. My decision on the problems must be regarded as final, and no correspondence on the Competitions can be entered into. Prizes will be allotted to the senders of the first three correct solutions opened on the closing date.

Peter and Judy

THE splendid health which these children enjoy is due to proper and adequate nourishment.

Growing children require more nourishment than can be extracted from the ordinary daily dietary. This is essential in order to replenish the depleted cells of the brain, nerves and body.

The parents of these bonnie children attribute their sound physical and mental development to the use of "Ovaltine" as their daily food beverage.

For "Ovaltine" is all nourishment—the concentrated nutriment extracted from those incomparable food gifts of Nature—rich creamy milk, fresh eggs, and ripe barley malt.

These essential food elements are correctly balanced in the proportions necessary for a growing child. Easy to digest and assimilate, "Ovaltine" also enables the system to extract more nourishment from other food. One cup of "Ovaltine" contains more nourishment than 7 cups of cocoa or 3 eggs.

Instead of tea or coffee give your children "Ovaltine" for breakfast and with their principal meals. Cheeks will become rosier, eyes brighter and limbs sturdier—signs of that health and vitality every child should enjoy

THE MOST POPULAR ACTOR!

Can You Name Him?

Vote Now in Our New £500 Competition

A CHEQUE for £250 is the amount of the first prize offered to readers in connection with our new Stage Favourites' Election to ascertain who is the most popular actor of the day.

It is a most useful amount, and it may very easily be yours—for a few minutes thought and the simple filling in of the names of your favourite actors on the voting paper in this issue.

This opportunity grasped now may help you to secure that delightful little two-seater which has made such an appeal to you at the Motor Show. If it is to be yours, do not fail to register your votes now.

In reply to many inquiries, and for the information of all competitors, we wish to make it clear that you may vary, as you please, the names of your ten favourites on your different voting papers. That is to say, each voting paper may show a totally different selection of the "ten most popular actors." Read the conditions below.

£500 CASH PRIZES FOR READERS

THE BYSTANDER offers £500 in cash prizes to be divided as follows:

1st Prize, £250 2nd Prize, £100 3rd Prize, £50

And Twenty Prizes of £5 Each to readers who succeed in giving correctly, or most nearly correctly, a list of ten actors in the order voted by the majority to be the most popular.

FOR THE ACTOR HEADING THE POLL

To the "star" who receives the greatest number of votes, and is thus acclaimed the most popular actor of the day, THE BYSTANDER, on behalf of a great host of admirers and as a token of their regard and esteem, will present a souvenir gift in the form of a cabinet of 1,000 of the famous La Corona "Corona" cigars. The cigars which will make up this gift have been specially prepared for THE BYSTANDER at the La Corona Factory in Havana.

WHAT YOU HAVE TO DO—is very simple. A BYSTANDER Selection Committee has chosen twenty actors (whose names and photographs appear below and on the two succeeding pages) as being most representative of the leading stage favourites of to-day.

Go through these very carefully, and select and vote for (see voting paper on page 3 of cover) the ten actors who stand highest in your affections. Fill in their names on the voting paper. The decision will be made by popular vote. The ten actors, of the twenty named above, receiving the most votes will be accepted as the most popular.

The first prize of £250 cash will be awarded to the reader whose voting list, in correct order, most nearly approximates to the ten favourites voted the most popular. The second prize of £100 will go to the sender of the next most nearly correct voting list — and so on.

There is no entrance fee.

The competition will remain open until December 31.

Readers may send in as many voting papers as they wish, and may vary their lists as much as they please, but each must be filled in and cut from THE BYSTANDER. Further voting papers will appear each week in the succeeding issues of THE BYSTANDER up to and including that of December 26.

THE CANDIDATES.

WHICH of these well-known actors are your favourites? They are named here in alphabetical order. To win a big cash prize choose the ten you like best and fill in their names on the voting paper on page 3 of the cover.

DOGS OF THE DAY

Showing, Hogging, Ratting, and Fighting

BY "THE KENNELMAN"

Sketches by NICOLSON

TO-DAY'S Dog Show at Norwich provides over 200 Classes. If your special fancy is for Wire-haired Fox Terriers, you should be able to enjoy yourself in Kentish Town to-morrow, when the Prince of Wales Road Baths will house a Championship Show of "Wires only." There's a Show at Cambridge, too, to-morrow, which should yield lots of interest, canine and human. Doggy undergraduates have many difficulties to contend with, but can be very, very keen. They and other enthusiasts will muster in strength at Cambridge's Corn Exchange to-morrow. And on Friday we shall have 500 separate Classes to study at the Holland Park Hall Show—quite a function.

Asked to anathematise root and branch the motorist who fails to swerve his car to avoid running over a Dog in a busy street, I am more than a little puzzled. In comparatively plutocratic pre-War days a motorist myself, I occasionally take the wheel of another (and still oofish) fellow's car even now, so know something about it. Also, for "Betworse, richypoo," as the padre said who performed the marriage tragedy over Mr. Polly, you remember, I'm for the Dogs, all the time. But—here's the rub—swerving a car suddenly in traffic does often prove as deadly to the person swerved for—canine or human—as for the driver, and for other users of the road. In the case of the common or domestic fowl, I have found it safest (for all parties) to steer straight for it, without the smallest deflection. Each case must be judged on its merits, and the refusal to swerve must sometimes be right, even if it sends a good Dog west. But the motorist for whom Dogs in the road simply don't count—and I admit the fellow's existence—is, of course, of the genus Hog, and ought to get cells and skilly without the option.

There's a moral. If we let our Dogs take us into crowded thoroughfares, we owe it to them to teach them to keep strictly to heel at the first word of warning. Either that or the lead. Neglect of both is "asking for it," and a shame.

A quarter of a century ago, the late Gilbert Allen sold two Irish Wolfhound bitches at Cruft's Show. (Is not his brother, Cuthbert of that ilk, largely responsible for the heaven-sent Puppy food, Saval, which Spiller's dispense?) One became the mother of "Finn, the Wolfhound," a figure in romantic literature; and the other helped to establish the fame of Mr. I. Everett, of Felixstowe, who has unremittingly served this noble breed ever since, sending specimens literally all over the world. With three decades of continuous experience behind him, he now breeds Irish Wolfhounds of the size of Shetland ponies, and sound as a bell withal—surely a record to rejoice in, of genuine additions to the good things of the world.

Terriers have been enjoying first-rate sport as ratters during the past month. And thousands of 'em who ought to have enjoyed the same useful experience have been denied it, owing to slackness on the part of their human associates. The destruction wrought each year by rats would keep all the unemployed in bread and cheese. The other day I saw one stocky little Sealyham account for seventy-three rats in an afternoon. There are any number of Terriers in Britain who could do as well, but whose C.O.'s never give them the chance of seeing a rat. Something wrong here. Incidentally, why not turn a few thousand of the unemployed on to ratting in the fall of the year? Healthy, fine sport, and a deal more beneficial than any amount of processioning, and organ-grinding, and cornet-blowing. In any case, every able-bodied Terrier should be given his chance. When a real public service is better fun than most forms of wickedness, it's worth encouraging.

"Steer straight for it"

The which reminds me of the not infrequent lady correspondent whose problem is that her well-beloved Terrier has hugely embarrassed her by becoming so pugnacious (where his own kind are concerned) as to be no longer a possible walking companion. Would it be a wise solution to exchange the beloved ruffler for a bitch? Well, one has known some tolerably bellicose bitches, too, and——"The Female of the Species," you know, can develop quite a formidable punch. But it is a fact that the chivalry of the race prevents her male kin from accepting the gage, and that, as the average street shelters many more male than female Dogs, your bitch is less likely than her brother to put up a scrap during the afternoon walk. The alternative of always taking the swashbuckler out on a lead is, of course, poor fun; and I admit that I know of no sure cure for the fighting taste, once really developed. (It's often the outcome of neglected or ill-regulated puppyhood.)

The fact that the Distemper Research Fund still lacks the financial support it needs is puzzling, as well as worrying, many knowledgeable Dog-lovers. The explanation is the old one—want of thought; which is just as mischievous as want of heart. The thing needs advertising. No decent Briton would grudge a few shillings to help rid Dogdom of its most deadly scourge. Those who think and understand must make up for those who don't, or won't, and send along their guineas, please, to the Field Office, or Kennel Club.

Where doubt is felt about a Dog deal, by post, with strangers, advantage may be taken of the "Our Dogs" Deposit System. The office is in Oxford Road Station Approach, Manchester.

The popular establishment of the Pekingese in this country does not date back more than about five and twenty years; in China (where he is known as the Lion Dog, and was, till modern times, confined to the Palaces) perhaps as many centuries. A sumptuous book on the subject, no more than a year or two old, was published by Messrs. Heinemann: The Dogs of China and Japan.

The John Haig Famous Hostelry Series

The Maid's Head Norwich.

When the Churchwardens Paid the Piper

AMONG the many fantastic processions witnessed by guests at the Maid's Head during the five centuries in which it has figured as a hostelry, the Guild processions of the seventeenth century were probably the most picturesque. The quaint mummeries of the clowns, the antics of the gaudily-dressed "whifflers," were outdone by Snap-dragon, the terror of the children, who snatched the boys' caps and exacted a penny or twopence for their return.

That these wild wags and frolickers were a source of some anxiety to the City Fathers we gather from an item in the churchwardens' reckoning for 1776-7, which reads: "Paid for taking the church gate out of the river, 1s."

As far back as 1472 the inn had a reputation for providing good entertainment, and we may well suppose that the noted sheriff of Norwich, John Curat, often partook of refreshment here. The old house he built during the latter part of the fifteenth century was distinguished by elaborate oak carvings, panels and ceilings, many of which are still preserved behind the business-like front of Backs, Ltd., in the Haymarket.

In the year 1779, when the French Revolution was commemorated at the Maid's Head, toasts were drunk to "The Revolution Societies in England," "The Rights of Man" and "The Philosophers of France." It is quite possible these toasts were honoured with "John Haig." Even at that time it was known as the whisky that had stood the test of more than a century and a half. Since then its reputation has been growing, and its popularity extending, among those who know and want the best.

NOVELTIES IN THE HOME

By MRS. M. VINCE

I WAS shown a cushion the other day, which looked like an ordinary cushion—a very pretty cushion in pink silk—but when you came to examine it you found that it opened, and that it had inside it a mirror, a box of powder and a powder-puff. It was ingenious. It was quite unexpected. I am sure that it will find a great many purchasers. It is just the sort of thing to attract people who come into a shop to spend without quite knowing what to buy, who have a present to give and do not know what to choose. But how many of those who buy such a cushion, I wonder, will stop when they get home and realise that it has nothing at all to recommend it, except that momentary quality which attracted them—that it was quite unexpected.

THERE is no object at all in concealing a mirror, a powder-box and a puff inside a cushion. No one carries a large cushion about with them. It remains in the room. If the room is a bedroom, then the mirror, and the powder-box and the puff are there already. If it is a sitting-room, they can be much more easily concealed in a bag. If you are too lazy to get off the sofa to go to the dressing-table for them, or to find your bag, you will certainly be too lazy to get them out of the cushion on which you are lying. Indeed, I cannot imagine a less convenient place for really lazy people to keep things. And if you are as lazy as all that, you will certainly want a cushion which is soft and comfortable, and not one which has been spoilt in order to take the place of a dressing-table.

NO, there is literally nothing to be said for that cushion. It has ceased to be a good cushion to become something else which no one can want it to be. It has no reason at all for existing. Yet I wonder how many houses will have these cushions. For we all like the unexpected. We all admire cleverness. We admire it in things, if not in people, much more readily than we admire beauty.

THOSE who make an art of selling things know this. They know just how to catch us in the first flush of admiration or amusement for something unexpected, and before the flush has passed the thing is done up in brown paper and the money has been paid. Moreover, they are quite frank about it, almost as frank as the shopman who, when asked what something was for, replied with beautiful simplicity that it was for a Christmas present. They call all these things "novelties," and that is really to say much the same! They do not recommend them for any other reason than that they are something which we have not seen before. And for most people that is enough. They will look at this cushion and say, "Norah will never have seen one of these before. It is sure to interest her." Or they will say, "This will certainly amuse John. You know how he loves anything ingenious. He always plays with the children's new toys." And so the cushion is bought and sent to Norah or John, and Norah is interested, and John is amused, for a time, just as you were when you first saw it in the shop. But then Norah and John have to find a place for it in their house, which probably already contains all the things that they need; and the pink cushion—with its mirror, and its powder-box and its puff—will be put in the drawing-room, in which very likely pink is altogether the wrong colour. There, out of respect for you who gave it, they will keep it for some time after it has become a thorough encumbrance, before they hide it in the lumber-room.

A SOPRANO OF NOTE

Miss Olive Goff, a clever young soprano, who gave a song recital at the Æolian Hall last Wednesday. Miss Goff is the daughter of Mr. Fred E. J. Goff the artist

AFTER all, why should we always feel it necessary to give permanent presents? Why should we not, if we want to show Norah or John that we are thinking of them in friendliness and affection on their birthdays, be content to give them simply a passing interest and amusement? In fact, why cannot we hire these novelties instead of having to buy them? And why should not Norah and John, when they have admired the ingenuity of this cushion, felt grateful to us for amusing them with it, and amused their friends with it in turn, be able to send it back to the shop?

THIS would solve the chief problem of giving presents, the problem of choosing for people who already have all that they need. It would get over the difficulty which so often makes giving an irritation where it should be a pleasure. Let someone start a shop, and keep it well stocked with all the latest novelties, ingenuities and absurdities, so that we may hire them, and send them with a graceful message, "May this entertain you for a little while as it has entertained me," and a label giving the date on which the shop would call to take it away.

A BIG NOISE IN "LONDON CALLING!"

IN THE SPOT LIME

By "ELECTRICS"

I HEAR it on good authority that Sybil Arundale will be the Lyceum's pantomime "boy" this Christmas, and I hope it's true—if only because it will give such satisfaction to the young admirer who recently wrote to her his prophecy that "one day she'd become quite well-known."

AFTER reading the script of the Marie Stopes play, to be produced shortly at the Court, I can express myself in entire agreement with the Lord Chamberlain. There is nothing in it to which he could possibly object.

WITH such a fine cast, such an eminently suitable theatre and such a cheerful outlook altogether, it seems that The Importance of Being Ernest Benham will come to be the famous comedy's title before long

A FAMOUS musical comedy actor spent a recent afternoon in the Strand, collecting for a hospital, and in the midst of it all a newspaper photographer took a picture of him. The picture appeared next day; but by accident the gentleman's name was not mentioned. He was shown the picture, and observed, "What do I care? I was there for the cause—not for myself." Which was such a remarkable observation for a "star" of our London stage to make that I hasten to record it.

I ALSO hasten to record Donald Calthrop's refusal to be personally photographed during one of his Kingsway rehearsals, on the ground that "the public will be much more interested in a picture of somebody who is actually appearing."

AND even a third wonder of the stage world comes to my notice. The Adelphi people recently invited a party of newspaper men to see Head Over Heels . . . , and these newspaper men had, to the full knowledge of the management, no paper in which to write reciprocal "puffs." The last issue of the paper had come out two days before!

The Human Race

THE ART OF MANUFACTURE.

BY H. DENNIS BRADLEY.

WITH Europe a festering muck-heap of political faction, it is encouraging to find in England an instance of post-war progress in the art of manufacture.

For many centuries this country has been famous for producing the finest cloth materials in the world. But during the war the quality of the finer grades deteriorated. That was because the Government took control of supplies, inflated the costs, and made £60,000,000 profit without a blush. In those unpleasant days everything was controlled with the exception of Mr. D. Lloyd George's uncontrollable verbosity.

Governmental control of industry is practical Socialism, blatantly impure and immorally simple.

Since our release from this bondage a new and remarkable discovery in manufacture has been made in a material that will never wear out.

The weight of it is so light that it can be tailored into an attractive suit and worn in any season of the year and for all the years of one's life; and the strength is so tremendous that it is absolutely untearable. It is thorn-proof and scratch-proof. The secret consists of using the finest two-ply yarn and manufacturing the warp and weft in such a way that it is impossible to break the thread.

One can scratch it violently with a steel needle and make no impression, or take a pointed pencil and pierce a hole through the knee—or through any other part of the trousers—and by pulling the cloth firmly from side to side the hole will disappear.

There are 150 different designs of this material on view at the establishments of Pope and Bradley. It is made in all shades of grey, lovat and heather mixtures, fawns, browns, blues and silk mixtures, and in a variety of different weaves and designs. It is even made in white so that it can be worn for hard-court winter tennis.

Essentially it is an ideal material for sporting purposes, but it has been so developed in many of the ranges that it can quite possibly be made for ordinary town wear, either for suits or light-weight overcoats.

These new materials will certainly last an ordinary lifetime, if not as long as Mr. Shaw's New Methuselah.

The price for either a lounge suit, sports suit or overcoat of this material is ten guineas.

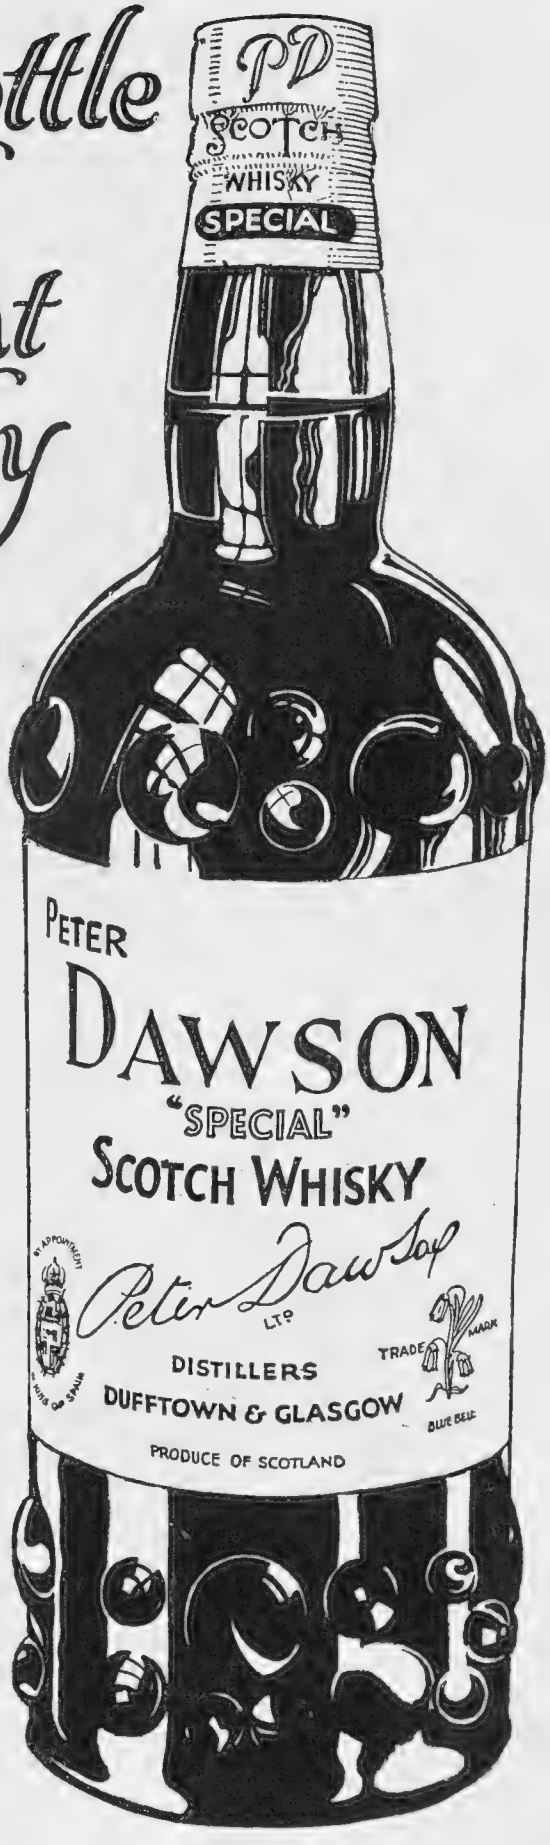
This is the bottle to know if you want fine whisky



It is the new 'brambled' and 'dimpled' bottle in which Peter Dawson Whisky is now sold.

It is 'brambled' and 'dimpled' in this peculiar manner because the whisky it holds is so good that it needs to be protected by a bottle which cannot be imitated.

Whoever wants fine whisky now has four different ways of seeing that he gets it.

He can ask for Peter Dawson by name. He can see that this peculiar bottle is brought. He can taste the P.D. quality. He can mix the whisky with soda, and discover for himself why a P.D. and soda has come to be recognised both here and abroad as the best thing in whisky-and-soda.

Remember, it is the 'brambled' and 'dimpled' bottle you want.

If you should have any difficulty in obtaining supplies of Peter Dawson Whisky send us your cheque for £7 10s. and we will forward a case of twelve bottles through our nearest agent.

IN THE SPOT LIME (concluded)

MORE than one actress has been "rumoured" as the successor of Gertrude Lawrence, when the time comes for that clever young lady to leave London Calling! for André Charlot's London Revue of 1924 in New York. Binnie Hale, of Katinka, has become favourite to the point of her engagement being definitely announced by one of our "If-you-see-it-in-my-column" paragraphists . . . but I can tell you that the correct name (known now for over a week) is not hers.

ROBERT COX tells me how much he hopes that, when, in December, he reappears as a musical play composer (with Harris Deans as author), his publicists will not trot out once more the story that he is associated, not only with minims and quavers, but with the manufacture of a famous glue. "It sticks to one so," he protests.

WHERE the Rainbow Ends again this Christmas? I hope so—and I hope they'll have some new scenery and costumes.

THE tritest dictum that's come my way of late has done so from the direction of Tubby Edlin: "Tragedy's all very well; but comedy—ah! that's no laughing matter."

THEY speak—this whilst I think of it—of Dorothy Minto in a sketch on the "halls" before long; and of a revival of Hamilton Fyfe's knock-out playlet, The Borstal Boy. And I hear every few weeks that Lumber Love, a musical comedy, is "imminent."

"FOR THE SECOND TIME OF ASKING"

Miss Kate Welch, who made her first stage appearance as Praskovia in "The Merry Widow" when it was produced in 1907. She is once more playing this part in the present revival at Daly's Theatre

THEN La Flamme, with one of the Vanbrugh sisters, wants a New Year home; which also does Daisy Fisher's fragrantly delightful Lavender Ladies, done by one of the Sunday evening producing societies last season, with much success.

THE presence of Royalty at theatres isn't being so widely announced as of yore. Which is a good thing; for Royalty does like an occasional bit of "off time"—and so doesn't too dearly love the management that rushes off to Fleet Street before the Royal Box has been sat in five minutes.

THERE was an extraordinary amount of fuss made about the recent wedding of Lila Maravan and Ronald Simpson, wasn't there? They might have been "stars" themselves—instead of only "stars"-to-be. The "news value" of their story lay, of course, in their having chosen "Barrie" music as accompaniment to the register-signing, and in their being at the time a pair of understudies de luxe of Fay Compton (in The Little Minister) and Ivor Novello (in Enter Kiki) . . . and that such "news value" was so mighty strong for them they were doubtless the first fully and gladly to appreciate.

The Literary Log

ROLLED BY RALPH STRAUS

As a rule I do not like novels about the occult, but there are exceptions, and I make an exception in the case of Miss Ada Barnett's new story, The Joyous Adventurer (Allen and Unwin: 7*s.* 6*d.* net), which is an extraordinarily interesting piece of work. And here, perhaps, "occult" is not the right word to use, though I cannot think of a better. There is a most charming idea in the background. A baby is found in a wood by a delightfully unconventional Professor and brought up as his own. Who or what this baby may be nobody knows, but he is by no means an ordinary infant. In fact, he is so extraordinary that nobody (except those who are learned about the fairies) will understand very much about his parentage. During his all too short sojourn on this earth, however, Coppertop has many and very varied adventures—in the country with the inimitable Lady Condor—perhaps you remember her from a previous book?—travelling about with the Professor, at Cambridge where he gets into serious trouble, and—in love. His ideas are not ours, but he is a very lovable boy, and you will follow his sprightly career, I fancy, with the utmost enjoyment. Miss Barnett is a keen lover of nature, and she does not make the mistake of investing her gossamer theme with an out-of-place solemnity. It is all very joyous and entertaining, by far the best work she has done.

MISS ADA BARNETT

Whose new and very unusual novel "The Joyous Adventurer" is reviewed on this page

The new library of Broadway Translations is launching out in the most agreeable fashion. It is really something quite new. So often these new libraries do little more than reprint well-known classics, but the editor of this new series has his own ideas, and he is gradually bringing together a shelf-ful of good books which you are not likely to find elsewhere. The two new volumes are both excellent. Mr. F. A. Wright supplies a new translation of, and, incidentally, a most scholarly and interesting introduction to, Ovid's Ars Amatoria, here called The Lover's Handbook (Routledge: 7*s.* 6*d.* net). Usually people fight shy of this poem; it is dubbed "immoral" or "not suited to modern tastes." Naughty it may be in parts, but its interpretative value is great. Moreover, Mr. Wright is a cunning translator as well as a polished versifier. It is his aim to get the general spirit and atmosphere of Ovid rather than a literal rendering, and he fully succeeds in his purpose. His essay, too, on Ovid and English literature is a delightful piece of writing.

The other volume in the series is Cyrano de Bergerac's Voyages to the Moon and the Sun (Routledge: 7*s.* 6*d.* net), translated by Mr. Richard Aldington, himself a poet of distinction, and one of the best scholars of earlier French literature. Most of us know little of Cyrano except the alleged size of his nose. Rostand's picture, it would seem, is far from the truth. Mr. Aldington's account of the man and his work is clear and concise, and I suggest your reading it after you have enjoyed the voyages themselves. They, of course, are a joy, and it is extraordinarily interesting to note what use has been made of them by subsequent writers. The really scientific romance belongs to the nineteenth century, but even before anti-gravitational machines and the like had been invented by audacious authors, Cyrano had allowed his imagination to soar, and the adventures of his hero on the earth's satellite and the sun will intrigue even those who enjoy the flamboyant pictures of Mars given by the creator of Tarzan.

THE cinemas just now are busily "featuring" Central Africa, and if it be true that the camera does not lie, it would seem as though it is an even more extraordinary place than the explorers have allowed us to think. The producers of African melodramas, however, are right in thinking that the public is appreciating their efforts, for this country, even to-day by no means completely surveyed, has a romance and an interest of its own. Read, for instance, Mr. T. Alexander Barnes's book, Across the Great Craterland to the Congo (Benn : 25*s.* net). You may not be particularly interested either in geological problems or in the shooting of big game, but you cannot fail to be caught up by the author's enthusiasm. His expedition was a romance, even when he was not escaping from the unwelcome attentions of a lion or being charged by an angry gorilla. His photographs alone make up a whole panorama, and his book is one of the most entertaining of its kind which I have read for a long time.

MR. EDWIN BALMER, who wrote a very good novel called The Breath of Scandal, has just published an unusual "shocker." Its title is Keeban (Arnold : 7*s.* 6*d.* net), and you are invited to guess who Keeban may be, even before the astonishing things which Mr. Balmer has to relate have begun to happen. The scene is Chicago, its monde and its underworld. There is a certain Jerry Fanneal, the best of good fellows, and Jerry, apparently, commits the most atrocious crimes. A double? A subconscious personality? It might be either. You will find out the truth in the end, but before that you will have enjoyed all sorts of thrills. The story is of the cinema—cinemarish : for all that it is first-rate of its kind.

WHAT a good storyteller Mr. E. Phillips Oppenheim is! And even when he is not engaged in building up a mystery with beautiful ladies and wicked counts and a king or two, he can still be splendidly entertaining. There is no crime or mystery in The Inevitable Millionaires (Hodder and Stoughton : 7*s.* 6*d.* net), but it is one of the most joyous comedies to be published this year. A delightful idea nestles in the background. Two very respectable, very rich, middle-aged bachelor brothers suddenly decide that they are too rich. They will spend their money somehow or other, and get rid of as much of it as they can. So they launch out into society, migrate from Maida Vale to the Savoy, invest in scatterbrained schemes, and help the undeserving poor. Surely they must sooner or later come to that agreeable state of comparative poverty which is their aim? It seems not. Try as hard as they like, they become steadily richer. It really is dreadful. Their name should be Midas. His new book must be counted amongst the very best work that Mr. Oppenheim has ever done.

KIA-ORA LEMON & ORANGE SQUASH

THE price of a large bottle of Kia-Ora Lemon or Orange Squash is now 2/3, but quality and strength are maintained.

Both Kia-Ora Lemon and Orange Squash are made from fresh fruit—lemons and oranges—and retain all their good qualities : delightful flavour, thirst-quenching, agreeable with lunch or dinner, beneficial in many ways.

To prepare lemon squash or lemonade from lemons and sugar is troublesome, but by using Kia-Ora Lemon Squash all trouble and delay are removed because you are buying white cane sugar already dissolved in fresh lemon juice, so all that is necessary is to add soda water or plain water, hot or cold.

The beverages are produced at a lower cost than by buying lemons and sugar, because a bottle of Kia-Ora makes 24-30 glasses of Lemon or Orange Squash.

Sold by all Stores throughout Great Britain at 2/3, 1/3, and 6d. per bottle.

THE REVELATION RIGID EXPANDING SUITCASE

THERE can be no exaggerating the advantages of the new "Revelation" Expanding Suitcase, of instantly variable capacity. Gone for ever is the harassing problem of what luggage to take for any journey, short or long. No longer is it necessary to cumber oneself, as of old, with a trunk or case far too large, nor, on the other hand, to cram less than is required into an ordinary suitcase.

Simply extend the hinges

The "Revelation" construction makes the case fit the needs, the same case sufficing just as suitably for a week-end visit, a week's trip, or a MONTH'S absence from home. It is thus a real economy, since, for the price of one, it serves the purpose of at least three ordinary suitcases—small, medium and large.

APPRECIATIONS

Mrs. Hilton Philipson, M.P. (Miss Mabel Russell).

I am delighted with the Revelation Expanding Suitcase. It is one of those things which, once you have used, you wonder how you could ever have managed without it. You ought to sell thousands.

Sir Joseph Tichborne, Bart.

I am very pleased with the Revelation Expanding Suitcase. It is remarkably convenient and greatly facilitates packing. I consider it very good value.

(Signed) JOSEPH TICHBORNE.

You, who invariably seem to have less room when packing to return (think of those lid-closing struggles!), will appreciate the boon of its instantly available expansion. In brief, a "Revelation" Suitcase is "always filled, but never full." No straps, nothing complicated, nothing to go wrong, and it locks at any size.

However full no effort to close.

New Season's Car Models on View at Olympia

THE following models are being exhibited at Olympia this year, and they will be found to embody all possible improvements that make for motoring comfort and a highly satisfactory road performance:—

15.9 H.P. 5-SEATER TOURER with Auster rear screen £695
15.9 H.P. SALOON-LANDAULETTE £915
11.4 H.P. 3-DOOR SALOON - £595
11.4 H.P. 4-SEATER OPEN TOURER with Auster rear screen - - - £475
8 H.P. LIGHT CAR with 2-seater body fitted with collapsible dickey seat, complete with arm-rests £250

The delightfully designed 2-Seater Light Car, with its 8 h.p. water-cooled 4-cylinder engine, is a revelation in Light Car engine design and efficiency. The handsome lines of the coachwork and the comfortable dickey seat will be instantly appreciated. This model is all-weather equipped, and within a few seconds can be converted into a cosy, weather-proof Coupé.

The Humber Stand is No. 148, and we cordially invite you to visit it during the Show. If that is impossible write to us for particulars and prices of all new Season's models.

LANCHESTER

WE have pleasure in announcing that in addition to the well-known Lanchester 40 h.p. 6-Cylinder Car we are exhibiting a new model; a 21 h.p. 6-Cylinder 4-Seat Tourer. This new Car is designed in complete uniformity with the "Forty." The same high quality of material and standard of workmanship is maintained, and many of the best-known Lanchester mechanical features are embodied. Each Car is representative of the highest grade in its class. Catalogues and Specifications will be gladly supplied on request, and we shall be delighted to arrange trial runs of either models.

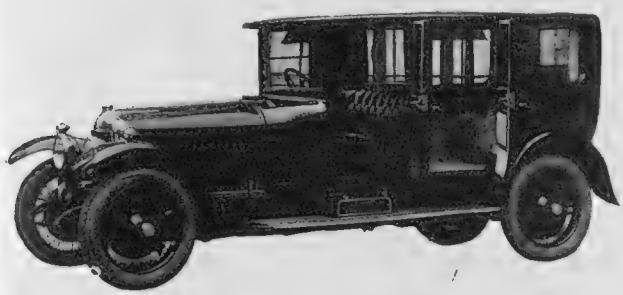
MORE SHOW NOTES

By "OLD HY"

WHILE all the world and his wife are examining the cars, tyres and accessories staged at Olympia, quite a proportion of the heads of the motor firms are entertaining their agents and dealers during the evening. The motor show gathers them from all parts of the world, so, consequently, they have an opportunity of collecting them all together at night time, and, after the meal, addressing a few kind words in the form of speeches as to the manufacturers' particular position in his own business, and a few remarks on the motor trade generally. At present I am stumbling round the stands somewhat lame by being trodden on by the crowds that have jostled me in their eagerness to see the exhibits. And, I suppose, it is about time I began to talk about these.

Minerva Belgium's best representative car, the Minerva, with its sleeve-valve engine, is exhibited with a 15 h.p. four-cylinder engine and a very complete equipment. Customers for Minerva cars have a wide choice for cars here, as besides the 15 h.p., this firm build a 20 h.p. four-cylinder, a 20 h.p. six-cylinder with four-wheel brakes, and a 30 h.p. six-cylinder with four-wheel brakes, so motorists can pick and choose which type of chassis they prefer. "With or without jam," I heard one little boy remark, when he heard his father ask if there was any possibility of trouble with the front-wheel brakes, and, being reassured by the stand attendant that there was no possibility of the front wheel locking, was led quietly away to the office—I presume—to sign the order form. The hand-lever on these front-wheel brake chassis operates on the cardon shaft brake, and not on the rear wheels, like some of the English models fitted with four-wheel brakes.

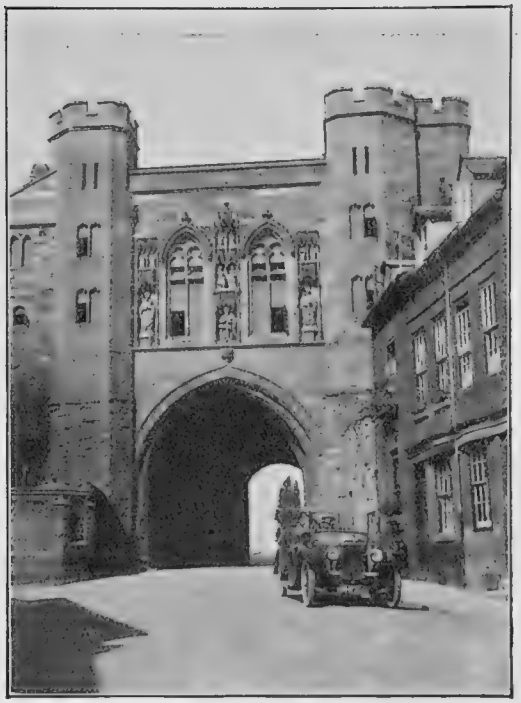


ALL THE OCCUPANTS HAVE GONE SHOPPING FROM THIS MINERVA ENCLOSED-DRIVE LANDAULETTE

Arrol-Johnston Scotsmen who visit the Exhibition will be glad to see that Arrol-Johnston cars are cheaper and bigger; that is to say the 15.9 has grown to 20 h.p. rating and costs less, while there is a new 14 h.p. Arrol-Johnston to seat four persons comfortably, upholstered in real leather and painted the usual A.-J. brown, for £398, complete with C.A.V. electric lighting and starting equipment, and the usual all-weather protection. As for the new 20 h.p., which is an enlarged edition of the popular 15.9 model, it has a track of 4 ft. 8 in., a wheel-base of 10 ft., and a minimum ground clearance of 9½ in., so is equally suitable for our Colonial friends as for our own roads, with right-hand control for the four-speed gear-box, which should prove a further inducement in its favour with motorists at home and abroad.

Darracq Four-wheel brakes on the Perrot system, automatic carburetter and magneto-ignition are the characteristics of the 15-40 h.p. Darracq, one of our French visitors to the Show. You can see them on the chassis and examine the overhead valve of the engine, or sit inside the wine-coloured landaulette and test the comfortable cushions and springs. There is also a smaller model, the 12-32 h.p., rated at 11.4, also with its four-wheel brakes, but fitted with a French type saloon body painted smoke-blue, price, complete, £625, one of the smallest chassis fitted with four-wheel brakes in the Exhibition. But then the French will have four-wheel brakes, because they drive—well, you know how they drive if you have been in a Paris taxi!

Ruston-Hornsby On the Ruston-Hornsby stand can be seen the Ruston "sixteen" all-season touring car, with its five-seated body with rigid door-opening side-curtains, with a divided front windscreen. Its spaciousness and ample leg room properly entitles it to be termed a comfort-riding family carriage. There is also the Ruston 20 h.p. model de luxe, which costs more money, and has a larger engine and extra equipment to the 16 h.p. But that model can also have these fitments for an extra £25, and, as a matter of fact, the wise motorist pays the extra. The "Twenty" Ruston makes an excellent vehicle for an owner-driver, and with its additional power creates a very high road average.



THE NEW 15.9 H.P. ARROL-JOHNSTON AT THE EDGAR GATEWAY, WORCESTER

Also, it is not expensive, either to buy originally or to run. For those who like a closed carriage there is the same chassis fitted with a limousine saloon also exhibited, while if they require a cheaper vehicle, there is the Ruston "Sixteen" with a two-seater body for £450.

Jowett When the visitor gets tired of inspecting a series of vertical engines, and at the same time is wishful to examine an inexpensive small car, he might do worse than pay a visit to the Jowett stand. Here he will find something different, as this sturdy little car, designed on economy lines with a good reputation for reliability, hill-climbing and hard service, is fitted with a water-cooled engine of the horizontally opposed type. Its two cylinders have proved by success in competitions that they give the car remarkable hill-climbing power, and, at the same time, economical running, costing under ½d. per passenger mile, with an average road speed of thirty miles per hour. It will be found staged both as a two-seater priced at £168, with an extra £2 for a double dickey seat, and as a four-seater for £192, complete with seats and squabs in real leather with curled hair-stuffing, black leather cloth one-man hood, and all-weather metal-framed side curtains. Besides these advantages there is a glove rack to the rear seats, four side pockets and a tool-box under the rear passenger's foot-rest. It is painted saxe-blue or grey to choice, and if an electric starter is wanted on any models an extra £10 must be paid. But there you are, something different, and yet a very efficient carriage for a poor man—that is to say, for most of us.

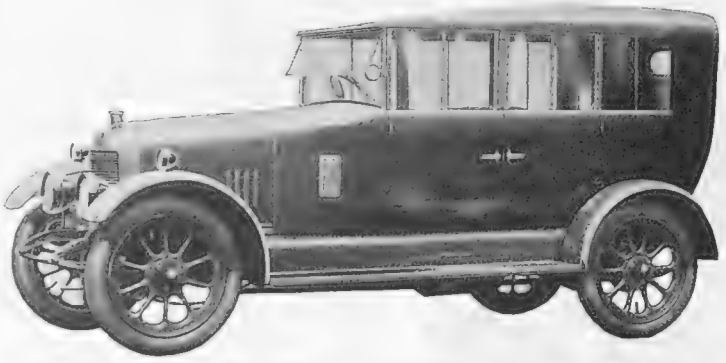
Ariel One of the lowest priced cars in the Show to seat four people is the 9 h.p. Ariel, with its all-weather body, for £165. It is one of the two-cylinder water-cooled engines in the Show with a right-hand control for its three-speed gear-box, and an approximate fuel consumption of 45 miles to the gallon. Who will want to buy a motor-cycle and side-car after they have seen this—unless they are very young and prefer to get tanned by exposure to the elements than ride in comfort, well protected in this little car? The starter is not included, but can be fitted for £12 extra, but with such a small engine, except for the trouble of getting out of the front seat, it is hardly wanted. Strictly speaking, one ought to call it a 1 litre car, for that is the cubic capacity of its two cylinders. Also it has a differential, so there is no cheapening in the chassis construction, while Lucas dynamo lighting and magneto ignition are provided.

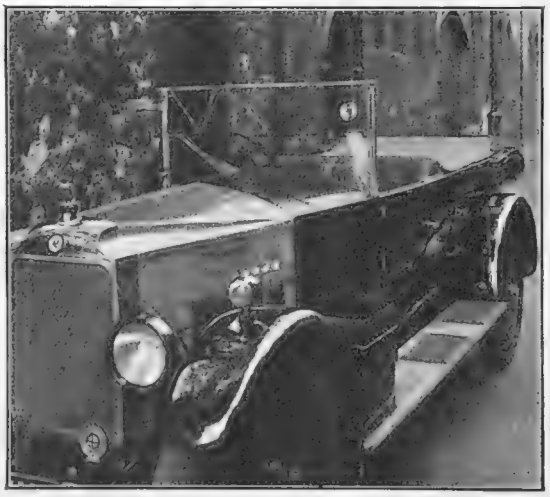
Triplex Safety Glass Every motorist who values his eyesight, to say nothing of immunity from cuts to his person, should an accident arise, should visit stand No. 57, and inspect the exhibit of the Triplex Safety Glass Co., Ltd. All wind-screens, goggles, windows and back-lights of the coachwork should be fitted with Triplex Safety Glass, as it cannot splinter, and the number of serious accidents it has prevented is too numerous to mention.

Arnold Coachwork In the coachwork section, Messrs. W. H. Arnold and Company exhibit some very fine examples of all-weather coachwork. The newest style, the Elysée salon de ville, is fitted to a 15.9 h.p. Bentley chassis, the production being designed for both owner and chauffeur-drivers by the inclusion of self-raising windows to the front doors and a detachable canopy. Whilst this body is aluminium panelled, no metal is fitted above the belt line, as the entire roof, quarters and back are covered with enamelled leather, thus ensuring noiseless travel and a total absence of drumming. Besides this elegant carriage, a 30 h.p. six-cylinder Minerva carries an Eclipse four-door all-weather body seating five persons, a divisional partition being arranged to separate the front and rear portions as desired. This is the style of carriage quite a number of us have been seeking for some time, which is equally suitable to drive oneself, and at night-time—or other occasions—permit of the paid driver taking the wheel and at the same time raising the partition so that he need not be privy to all that is said in conversation. The third example staged here is a similar body on a 19.6 h.p. Crossley, the front seats being adjustable armchairs. All these three cars have the same colour scheme of Etienne blue with orange chrome relief, a somewhat novel yet pleasing exhibit.



THE LIGHT NEW BEATONSON "ALL-LIGHTS" AND ALL-WEATHER-PROOF COACHWORK ON A MORRIS-COWLEY

Beatonson Screens One finds the Beatonson front and rear screens fitted on all sorts of cars in the exhibition, but besides this well-known part of the standard equipment of the modern motor, Messrs. G. Beaton and Sons, Ltd., the makers, are exhibiting in the gallery a new open touring all-weather coachwork body. Its particular merit is to replace the largely unsatisfactory system of Cape cart hoods and side curtains on the open touring car. It also provides an alternative system to the earlier and more costly methods of building totally enclosed bodies, so the new Beatonson all-weather hoodwork is staged on some of the cars in the main hall, though it is easier to examine it here. It provides a most satisfactory four-doored, six-windowed body for light cars such as the Bean, Morris-Cowley and Standard.



THREE PHEASANTS, FLYING ACROSS THE ROAD, SMASHED THIS TRIPLEX GLASS SCREEN, BUT NO ONE IN THE CAR WAS HURT

Straker-Squire Rated at 10.4 h.p., the four-cylinder Straker-Squire bids fair to take the exalted position occupied before the War by the "Fifteen" in the minds of discerning motorists. On their stand at Olympia it is shown with three types of coachwork, a two-seater with double dickey, a coupé, also with a double dickey, and a four-seated touring car de luxe model. This latter, I fancy, is really the style which the Men of good heart have all a trace of gipsy, and only molluscs know no call to wander.

To-day I'm captive—but to-morrow—I'll put the leagues between me and the bondage of my task.

And, amid the beeches, I'll find the workshop of the goldsmith Autumn.

I'll drink the perfume of cool earth and hear the whispering chorus of the falling leaves . . . . . .

Then returning, I'll ride the plains by moonlight—and the stars shall guide me to the glowing lights of home.

visitor will prefer as a general rule, for it holds its passengers comfortably, has quite good all-weather equipment, a rear windscreen, and its price of £390 is well within means. Of course, if you want to be one of the "kings of the road," there is the big six-cylinder, rated at 23.8 h.p., that can hop you along at seventy or more miles per hour, whether it is fitted with the open body or the closed saloon coachwork, both examples of which are shown. Naturally one has to pay more money for that and become a four-figured car owner. Anyway, you have two choices on this stand, a popular model and a higher-powered machine, both of which are really first-class.

Durant Olympia contains quite a number of large cars at low prices, and those on the search for vehicles of this character will find an excellent example on the Durant Stand. When one can buy a standard two-seater 15.6 h.p. Rugby four-cylinder for £180, and a five-seater for £185, or with a British-built body for £240, it makes one sit up and take notice. The phenomenal success of Durant Motors has put them into a leading place among the car manufacturers of the world. A firm that can produce six hundred thousand cars per annum naturally must come from the U.S.A., as, if they were built here to that extent, they would have a hard task to jump the tariff walls and other increasing price production factors. But in the U.S.A., with the largest home market in the wide world, people can dare talk of productions of over half a million annually. The Durant four-cylinder standard two-seater is staged at £310, and the business coupé at £375, which will make our poor British manufacturers wish that they could produce it at the same price, leave alone sell it for that figure. All models are equipped with five tyres and demountable rims, and, while British motorists will buy American cars fitted with coil and battery ignition, as fitted on the Durant, and be perfectly satisfied, yet they will not look at it on a British built vehicle.

the past season, which is saying a good deal, as this company was one of the few who paid a dividend during the past year. This season it hopes to obtain equal success, and increased profits by means of the six-cylinder 15.7 h.p. model, because it is now fitted with a greatly improved form of coach-work, both as an open and enclosed carriage. For those who want to pay a little more than they have to give for the popular 10 h.p., there is the model de luxe on the same chassis, which has an increased number of fittings for its equipment, and perhaps a little smarter looking body on it, though in the brilliant lights at Olympia, outwardly they appear equally well constructed. The six-cylinder has one of the new Weymann enclosed bodies, which will appeal to those who want a fast small enclosed carriage that they can run economically and can fit into quite a small garage. Its cost is only £500, while that of the 10 h.p. touring Singer de luxe is £235.

A 12-30 H.P. HORSTMAN TWO-SEATER

Horstman A car that has steadily found favour among that class of motorist who has not too much money to spend on cars and wishful to get the best they could for their cash, is the 12-30 h.p. four-cylinder Horstman. At Olympia it is staged with an all-purpose four-seater body with a four-panel windscreen, adjustable sidescreen panels and metal-framed celluloid side-screens, painted suede-grey or royal blue; detachable upholstery in real leather, pile carpet or lin-rubber linings, adjustable seats, special accommodation for parcels and tools, engine-turned and polished aluminium dashboard, speedometer, clock, dash-lamp and oil indicator, complete with either electric or mechanical starter, £325; which is not so dusty, is it? But you must not expect the standard everyday Horstman to hop along the road at seventy miles an hour, as the racing Horstman has been tuned up to do and a bit more. The two-seater, with dickey, costs £10 less, while if Dunlop low-pressure tyres are fitted £5 extra is charged. But whether one pays for all the extras or not, few cars of this rating give as much value for their cost. A smaller Horstman, rated at 8.9 h.p., with three forward speeds, cantilever springs, mechanical starter and four-seated body, with the usual equipment, is staged price complete for £235. This has a four-cylinder overhead valve engine of 60mm. bore and 100 mm. stroke, whereas the 12-30 h.p. Horstman has the Anzani engine of 69 mm. bore and 100 mm. stroke, rated at 11.9 h.p., with magneto or coil ignition, according to purchasers' wishes.

I hate Olympia. It always gives me a nasty cold.

Nevertheless, I shall be there, all day and every day, because I know that lots of people will come and look at the beautiful new cars—and wish they could have one in place of the old crock at home.

MISS MARION PEAKE NEGOTIATING A TURN IN HER 10 H.P. SWIFT

Swift Anybody in search of a nice two or three seater at about £250 should pay a visit to the Swift stand, as that is the cost of the 10 h.p. Swift with two-seater and dickey body and also for the "compressed" four-seater type, which has room for two adults in front and two children in the rear seats. Shock absorbers are fitted together with spring gaiters, a speedometer, and a clock in addition to the 1923 equipment. Also, on the bigger 12 h.p. Swift cars staged, extra equipment in the form of a luggage grid, dash lamp, screen-wiper, driving mirror, shock absorbers, grease-gun and an M.E. rear windscreen has been provided, though, of course, the rear windscreen is only placed on the four-seated open-touring car. These M.E. rear windscreens are quite the fashionable protection for the back seat passengers, and can be seen on a number of cars at Olympia, as well as on the vehicles in the Hammersmith Road, and the thoroughfares leading to the exhibition. For windscreens to protect the occupants of the hindmost seats in open touring cars have become an absolute necessity, owing to the increased speed at which all of them travel.

B.P. Spirit The British Petroleum Co., Ltd., who are the distributing organisation for the Anglo-Persian Oil Co., Ltd., are to be found in the gallery, where they are showing, besides the familiar B.P. Spirit in its khaki can, No. 3 grade in the blue can, and Aviation spirit in the purple can, a selection of their other products, such as tractor vaporising oil, heavy and light fuel oils, lamp oils and lubricants. An interesting feature is a series of photographs of the huge refinery at Llandarcy in South Wales, where B.P. spirit is produced.

Goodrich Tyres Goodrich Cord Motor Tyres, beaded-edge and straight-edge tyres and rubber accessories for the motor industry are exhibited by the B.F. Goodrich Co., Ltd., on stand No. 515. Their aim is to produce the best possible pneumatic tyres; they have certainly progressed far in their ideal.

A Surprise Packet Last Thursday, Rolls-Royce Ltd., let out a well-kept secret—the introduction of the four-wheel brake system on their new 40-50 h.p. chassis. The new Rolls-Royce will now be fitted with six brakes (the double braking system on the back wheels being retained) at no additional price.

HORSTMAN

"The Car that passes you"

BE SURE YOU SEE The Beauty of Bath AT STAND No. 6 OLYMPIA NOV. 2-10

IT IS WORTH WAITING FOR

THE 12/30 HORSTMAN enjoys a reputation for beauty of line and finish, coupled with an exceptional turn of speed. Capable of 60 m.p.h. on the road, it can pass with ease the majority of cars, at the same time proving an economy of petrol consumption and general running costs. All-weather equipment, including windscreen extensions and rigid side screens, is also a special feature. The 9/20 h.p. Four-Seater introduced for next season, develops power in plenty for family motoring. It is a car that may be purchased with every confidence and at a price well within the reach of everyone.

This is the full range of Horstman Models:
12/30 h.p. Two-Seater, £315. Four-seater, £325.
Coupé, £395.
Super Sports, £500. 9/20 h.p. Four-Seater, £235.

Almost 1/3rd the cost—and better than a New Tyre

ARM RUBBER PRODUCTIONS

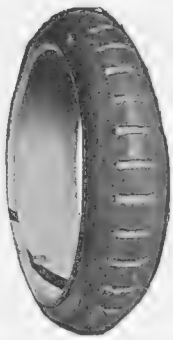
WE GUARANTEE THE NEW ALMAGAM TREAD

we fit to your old covers—either Grooved or Swastika pattern—for 3,000 miles, but the unsolicited testimonials we receive show that a tyre, after it has been retreaded by us and all defects removed from the casing, is better than a new tyre.

HOW ALMAGAM RETREADING IS DONE!

No. 1.—As the tyre arrives at our Works, after examination it is stripped of its old tread and all old rubber is buffed off, leaving the casing clean inside and outside.

No. 2.—Example of a badly made tyre which we open out and rebuild and make decidedly better than new. The worn and weak places having been found the casing is then sent to the solutioning department, where it receives many coats of rubber solution.



No. 3.—The casing has now been rebuilt and strengthened, and is in a fit condition to be vulcanised. The tread is made of the same material and fitted in the same way as a new tyre.

No. 4.—The result of the Almagam Process. The tyre with either a pattern, grooved or steel-studded tread is now ready to cover thousands more miles.

ARM HOSE

Our Hose Department is as large and as capable of turning out at least as much hose as any factory in the country. We make hose for every purpose.

RUBMETAL HOSE for conveying oil, petrol, petroleum, acids, alkalies, etc.

HIGH PRESSURE STEAM HOSE.

BREWERS' HOSE, specially sweetened for conveying beer, spirits, and hot liquors.

GARDEN AND GARAGE HOSE.

OUR RADIATOR HOSE is well known throughout the Motor Trade. We supply this to manufacturers of motor cars, cut exactly to the length that they use in connecting up their Radiators. This saves them waste and trouble of cutting from long lengths. We supply several of the largest motor car manufacturers in this country with these connections.

TESTIMONIALS

Winchester,

Thorverton, Devon,

"Dear Sir,—I have received your invitation to give your retreads a trial. Possibly you are unaware that I have been a regular client of yours for years, as my covers come to you through the Wessex Garage, in Exeter. I think you are very modest in guaranteeing them for 3000 miles. Some time back I bought my first 30 x 3½ smooth cover from you—this did about 8000 miles. I then sent it to you for retreading, and it went on for another 7000. I then sent it again to you, and it now has another 3000 to its credit. It will shortly make its bow to you again, for I find your retreads usually outlast any other new covers with great ease.

Yours faithfully, ———"

N.B.—The above mentioned 30 x 3½ tyre is an ARM TYRE, and was manufactured by us. The latest price of this ARM TYRE is £3 . 11 . 0

Lotus agents are to be found in every district and have special facilities for giving good shoe service. A beautifully illustrated style book entitled "Thro' Autumn Windows" will be sent to any reader upon application to Lotus Ltd. Stafford

Shoe Shop Interiors

The outside of a shoe shop is doubtless important — the noble facade of curved glass windows, gleaming with metal and polished brass; the show of shoes in all their impeccable newness, fitted upon trees or shoe shapes impossibly small and elegant in appearance; the electric lights. All these things are attractive. But after all it is the service within the shoe shop which counts. Lotus and Delta agencies are famous for this interior charm. They are all shops with a tradition of good service. They are chosen and selected for this reason. Moreover, the Lotus and Delta system of multiple measurements, and the large quantity of fashionable styles kept constantly in stock at the factory, enable the Lotus agent to supply you with just what you want with the utmost despatch. Every shoe is stamped with the price and style number on the sole.

In the Cornish Riviera

SUNRISE AT ST. IVES.

"The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night
Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of light."
Romeo and Juliet.

CORNWALL is now generally recognised to be the English county pre-eminently suitable for Winter Holidays or residence, and its claims to this general recognition are of the weightiest description.

First there is the climate—rivalling for mildness and equability the best resorts on the Mediterranean Riviera.

Second there is the splendid range of coast scenery from Newquay on the north to Looe on the south coast, scenery which, once seen, leaves an ever-enduring impress on the memory.

Third there is the Atlantic influence. The county juts out into that mighty ocean, and the prevailing breezes carry ozone-laden air across the enormous expanse of water lying between Cornwall and the West Indies. The pure air and the constant breeze from the ocean have a wonderfully bracing effect upon the human frame.

Duvetyn: A Big Millinery Asset

THE impress laid by all the leading milliners on this material is unmistakable. It is the most formidable rival ever set up for winter wear against velvet, felt and panne, and is responsible for several of the most attractive models to be found at Gorringes, Buckingham Palace Road, S.W. Small need at this date to dwell on the high position held by this house where millinery is concerned. All the world knows the standard maintained of value and exclusive taste.

The epitome of simplicity and chic is the tiny cloche, illustrated, of pale leaf-green duvetyn, the crown stitched with radiating lines of shaded bronze silk soutache, these culminating at one side in a long tassel, caught at the summit by a wee motif of moleskin. With this there is worn a soft wide scarf of the same duvetyn, lined copper-red georgette, the long tassel end again cupped in moleskin, passing through a wide circle for security; complete, this exceedingly enchanting little set is only £4 19*s*. 9*d*.

THE CLOCHE WITH A CACHET

A little cloche of leaf-green duvetyn, trimmed by radiating lines of bronze silk soutache and a neat side tassel. It has the distinct cachet of Gorringe simplicity

Sketched by "Beta"

Especially becoming and seasonable is the companion model, with its crown of moleskin fur, and brim, gracefully curled up in front, of Persian embroidery, a diamond-shaped motif of the latter holding the stems of a cluster of parrot wing feathers. A chapeau extraordinarily well worth 69*s*. 6*d*. Of leather-coloured duvetyn, again, is a large picture shape, the wide brim edged pleated brown velvet, the crown completely hidden in front by a fan-shaped cross osprey mount; but all the picture hats here are surpassingly beautiful and tempting.

Frocks That Are Different

THE cult of dress displays is progressing rapidly, and it is with the keenest anticipation of fresh surprises that we await the spring of next year.

To the strains of weird music, I ascended the stairs at 25, Savile Row, W. 1, the other afternoon, to enter a salon artistically got up in soft shades of cream with black mouldings, where a white-clad musician sat on a big square pouf twanging a guitar. It was under such auspices that Miss Josephine Earle elected to open her dressmaking establishment informally at the above address. Closely connected with the theatrical world, Miss Earle again confounded us by her enterprise in enlisting the services of several well-known actresses and film artists to act as mannequins for the display of her very recherché evening and day gowns, tailor-mades and cloaks. These models, while conforming to fashionable edicts, unquestionably appeal as different, each one exhibiting some touch of distinctive value. Thus, in the case of a gorgeous evening cloak of dull, embossed gold tissue, the full flaring skirt was mounted at a long line to an almost fitted upper part, the latter embroidered with large, mock emeralds, the whole surmounted by a huge collar of rat chinchilla.

The tailor-mades are studiously simple, the skirts short and slim, and many coats are belted. The coming Riviera season is reflected in a mastic-coloured, perforated cloth long-coat, trimmed rich brown fur, as also in a wrap, fashioned of white cloth, heavily ribbed, that is planned with graceful cape sleeves. A show in every way to give one to think, and to realise, moreover, the independent spirit prevailing just now in the realms of dress.

THE SLIM LINE OF ELEGANT LIFE

A toilette for the evening—but very much "of the day" in its slim draperies. This black marocain gown, the harmony of which is so skilfully broken by the orange-coloured side drapery, is one of the new models of Messrs. Derry and Toms, of High Street, Kensington

Sketched by Betty Nisbet

Seductive Evening Gowns

THE vogue for the bead-embroidered evening gown is so prevalant, that it has become necessary to exercise great discrimination in making selection. It is possible to pick up commonplace little frocks, smothered in beads that drop if you look at them, for a mere song. But these are wholly lacking in artistic character and distinction, and those who are satisfied with such banalities, need not seek for them in the model gown department at Derry and Toms, Kensington, where only the best and most exclusive designs are recognised.

Owning a very large and old clientèle, the heads here have a long experience to go by, and they know exactly the type of smart woman that would select such a creation as the evening toilette pictured. This is at once chaste, graceful, and supremely of the moment, the black marocain, of which it is composed, displaying expert handing in its attractive slim draperies. The front, however, is left plain for the handsome embroidered device of diamanté, which is repeated in shoulder straps, the one longer than the other, while at the right side comes the one break to the harmony —lovely outstanding bow and ends of wide orange-coloured ribbon velvet.

Carried out in white opaque bugles and small beads is a similarly artistic design on a gown of eau de nil georgette. This also boasts the most original draperies, held to the figure by a band of the same embroidery. A tender snuff-coloured georgette is more decoratively treated in a set design with sequins and beads in tone, mingled with quaint little tortoiseshell hollow circles—a quite remarkably arresting model and very reasonably priced at 12½ guineas.

One of the most uncommon brocades imaginable, difficult to describe, but mainly Eastern in colouring and pattern, fashions one of the new and fuller gowns; the front is shaped circular and swept across from the right to the left side, and deeply bordered with dark fur. Then to meet the purses of their young girl clients, Derry and Toms are offering the dearest little dance frocks, in an artificial silk brocade that has a fascinating shot effect, at 4½ guineas. A particularly pretty style this, with its straight, sleeveless corsage, and skirt gathered over the hips, and a double pouf bow at one side.

That Sesame System

THE confidence expressed by the firm responsible for this particular method of permanent waving is most inspiring. That it is wholly different in application to all others is the first claim, insomuch as it is guiltless of the use of borax, tubes, pliers, and stretchers. These eliminations absolutely preclude all possibility of the hair becoming dry or brittle, while the whole process takes half the usual time. With children, the firm has had some startling successes. It is the hope of almost every mother that her girls, at least, shall have naturally curly hair, since nothing more enhances a sweet baby face. But, alas! there are more disappointments than realisations of this dream, and until the Sesame people propounded their exceedingly simplified and harmless method, children were subjected to the nightly ordinance of rag or paper curlers (inadequate at best) and a procedure equally disliked by the children themselves and their nurses. Whereas now, a visit to Rickert and Tietze, 7, Lower George Street, Richmond, will, in an incredibly short space of time, turn the straightest of hair into natural curls that will merely require the new growth treated every six or eight months. Thus a girl from the outset of her life is endowed with one of nature's most coveted assets—soft, shining undulating tresses, impervious to any atmospheric conditions or wet. Just think what that means in these days of sport, not to mention the busy strenuous lives the majority of us indulge in. A saving alike of time and money, since the majority of women, as they grow older, invariably require to have their thinning locks waved.

OPEN SESAME!

Two happy little girls reading all about the Sesame process which opens up a new way for wavy curls, in place of the old-fashioned nightly terror of rag and paper curlers

Of Interest to the House Proud

ONE of the latest catalogues to hand is that of Hamptons, Pall Mall East. As usual, it is a brochure that teems with illuminative matter, and for every article pictured in the book there are dozens more examples similar in price, but differing in the style. In any case, it provides an invaluable

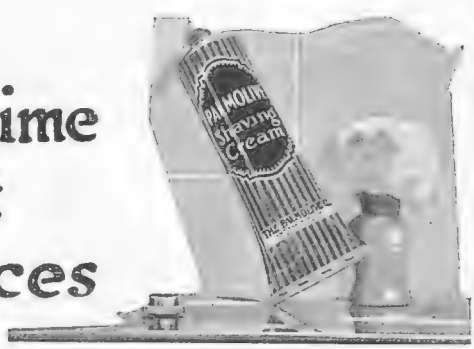
A One-time Test Convinces



The very first shave with Palmolive Shaving Cream will convince you that we have succeeded in developing a shaving soap better than any you ever used. Better in five important ways:—

1. A soap that multiplies itself in lather 250 times.

2. A soap that acts in one minute. No finger rubbing, no waiting. Just apply it and carry on.

3. A lather that maintains its creamy fulness for ten minutes.

4. Lather that not only softens the hairs but keeps them upright while you cut them.

5. A soap that leaves the face in fine condition, because of palm and olive oils, from which the cream is made.

Because of these qualities we claim that Palmolive Shaving Cream is not only better but incomparably the best. When you have tried it we believe you will agree with us.

Please post the coupon now, while you are thinking about it.

The Professor knew a frightful lot about Sanskrit and cuneiform, but Angéle rather doubted him on wine. She felt a little uneasy as he looked at the wine list. She knew what she liked, and was about to provide the information when he set her mind at rest by ordering "Big Tree" Sparkling Muscatel.

"Big Tree" Sparkling Muscatel is made in just the same way as Champagne—pure juice of choice grapes, many years matured in bottle. Happily between sweet and dry, it suits the taste of most. It is, and always has been, a French wine.

first aid to those about to furnish a house or flat, as well as assisting the many who have to replenish carpets, curtains, and furnishing fabrics. The prints, in many instances, are produced in colour, which is especially helpful in the case of carpets. The firm, of course, is especially noted for its Axminster carpets, guaranteed to be manufactured by the best English firms, and, consequently, thoroughly satisfactory and sound in value. Hamptons are always pleased to forward any of their illustrated lists on application.

High Heels or Low Heels?

THAT, of course, is a burning question at the moment. There are doubtless people, with no business to do so, who essay to wear low heels, frequently with entirely the wrong sort of clothes; whereas there are occasions and dress that practically demand a low, broad heel. That much being conceded, it is interesting to report what a principal of Messrs. Southall and Co., has to say on the subject. This expert believes that next year the prevailing height of heels will be about $1^3/_4$ or $1^7/_9$ths inches. No useful purpose, he considers, is served by the extremely high heel. On the other hand, it is impossible to finish or show off certain styles of dress successfully with flat-heeled shoes. The adjoined sketch shows the medium height prognostigated by Messrs. Southall in connection with a very dressy model of tangerine suede, that has gold bars, collar, and heels.

This firm is especially famed for its Start-Rite shoes for children. The salient feature of these shoes is the elongated heel on the inside (which prevents the arch of the foot dropping) supported by a stiffening blocked to the shape of the arch. A foot trained in the way it should go by the wear of Start-Rite shoes will be immune from the many ills to which it is heir.

Furniture of Other Days

Whatever be the fascination of period furniture—be it the veritable love of beautiful lines, or merely snobbishness—the vogue is as strong as ever. A glance at the history of "The Old World Galleries, Ltd.," 449, Oxford Street, is sufficient to show the trend of the times. It started in November, 1919, in tiny premises in Lincoln's Inn Fields. A few weeks later Mrs. Barrett, the originator, took the adjoining premises, and in several months' time "went West"—but in the prosperous sense of the term. She opened at 71, Duke Street, Grosvenor Square, taking the next door premises later in 1920. During 1921, additional branches were opened at "The Elizabethan House," Henley, and in Knightsbridge. In 1922, branches were opened in St. John's Wood, Baker Street and Bayswater. Now comes the new and extremely beautiful premises in Oxford Street, and the turning of the whole concern into a limited company. We wish The Old World Galleries as great a success in its new form as it achieved during the phenomenally short time in which it sprung to fame.

A New Pencil

Always Handy—Always Sharp

How often have you searched your pockets for a pencil to make hasty and important notes, only to discover (if you do find it) that the point of the pencil is broken, or that it will not write legibly? You can clip the new Waterman's Pencil in your waistcoat pocket just as you do your Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen so that you know just where to find it when wanted. It is always handy, always sharp, and the lead point is as firm and rigid as if it were encased in wood. Thanks, also, to its perfect shape and balance, Waterman's Pencil is a pleasure to use. It is wonderfully light in weight, and includes a receptacle with refills.

COOKING "EN CASSEROLE"

Red Mullet en Casserole

PLACE the fish (it is best to select small ones) in a marinade for two hours before cooking, then wipe them and cook them gently in butter for ten minutes. Put a pint of thick brown sauce into a stewpan with a finely minced onion, a large teaspoonful of anchovy sauce, a wineglassful of sherry and a pinch of cayenne pepper, let it simmer for twelve minutes, then add a few drops of carmine, and strain it into a casserole, add a teaspoonful of mixed tarragon and chervil and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Place the mullet in the sauce, cover the casserole and put it into a moderately hot oven for fifteen minutes.

Chicken en Casserole

Truss a fowl for boiling, and put it breast downwards into a casserole lined with slices of bacon. Allow this to fry a little, then add the giblets, a pint of cold water or stock, a carrot, an onion, a blade of mace, a teaspoonful of salt, and some black pepper or peppercorns. Cover closely, and cook in the oven till tender. Then strain off the gravy, adding a dessertspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Cut the chicken up into joints, and add to the onion and carrot a few mushrooms which have been cooked in butter. Thicken the gravy and serve the chicken in the casserole in which it was cooked. This is a good way of cooking an old fowl.

Quails en Casserole with Orange Salad

Prepare and truss six quails. Melt 2 ozs. of butter in a casserole, and, when hot, put in the birds and brown them all over. Cover with the lid, and put into a moderate oven till cooked. Take out the quails and keep hot. Drain the fat from the casserole, add half a pint of stock, a wineglassful of port wine or claret and about half the rind of an orange. Simmer for ten minutes, then stir in half a cupful of red-currant jelly. Put in the quails for ten minutes, season with salt, pepper and the juice of half a lemon. Remove the orange peel and serve with orange salad.

ORANGE SALAD.—Remove all pith and skin from the oranges, cut into the natural divisions, and season with salad oil, a little brandy, a teacupful of castor sugar and the same of finely chopped tarragon and chervil.

Ptarmigan en Casserole

Cut up a brace of ptarmigan into small pieces and put them into 1½ ozs. of butter in a casserole turn the birds well in this, then stir in about 1 oz. of flour, fry a pale brown, add rather more than half a pint of stock, a sprig of thyme and parsley, a very small onion, a teaspoonful of red-currant jelly, the same of Worcestershire sauce and a little Parisian essence (for colouring). Cover the casserole and let the contents cook in the oven for rather more than half an hour. Add a little wine to the gravy before serving. Thicken the gravy with a brown roux, should it not be sufficiently thick, as the success of the dish depends a great deal upon the gravy.

Curry of Mutton en Casserole

Melt 1 oz. of butter, and stir into it one minced onion and one minced apple, fry thoroughly without browning. Add a heaped dessertspoonful of curry-powder and fry again for a few minutes, adding also a dessertspoonful of ground rice. Put a cupful of good brown gravy into the casserole, add a teaspoonful of chutney and simmer in the oven for half an hour. Have ready some nicely cut dice of mutton, add it to the sauce and cook again in the casserole for three-quarters of an hour. Squeeze the juice of half a lemon into the curry and a dessertspoonful of sweetened condensed milk. Serve with well-cooked rice. EMILIA

"ERASMIC Shaving Stick"

Poise—calm, perfect poise—is one of the secrets of what men call personal magnetism.

To acquire poise you must get the "mechanics," the little things, of your daily and hourly life as perfect as can be.

Eliminate every small annoyance, from morning to night, and you are giving yourself the best chance of personal magnetism. For the nervy, irritable man is his own enemy.

Try "Erasmic" Shaving Stick as the beginning of the day's experiments in coolness.

It is the coolest of shaving soaps, the readiest of latherers, the best friend of the razor, the soap that leaves the skin actually refreshed—and never heated.

It's the finest preserver of the morning temper—the tonic soap.
